Senatorial Nominations.

THIRD SENATORIAL DISTRICT.

The Hard Shell Committee, of the Third Senatorial District, met last evening at [illegible], in West Broadway, for the nomination of a candidate for Senator. The meeting was organized by the appointment of John [illegible], of the Fifth, as Chairman, and Maurice O'Keefe, of the Sixth Ward, as Secretary.

On motion of Maurice O'Keefe, seconded by Andrew O'Keefe, the meeting then adjourned, from respect to Mr. Henry J. [illegible], of the Fourth Ward, a member of the Committee, who deceased during the afternoon.

FOURTH SENATORIAL DISTRICT.

The Hard Shells of this district met at No. 418 Grand-street, to nominate a Senatorial candidate. Mr. James Johnson was moved to the Chair. All the delegates were present but three. The business transacted during the night was merely preliminary, and the Convention adjourned to meet on Tuesday night next. James J. [illegible], of the Thirteenth Ward, Edwin Smith, and Wesley Small, both of the Seventh Ward, were put forward as candidates for the nomination.

FIFTH SENATORIAL DISTRICT.

The Convention met last evening. [illegible] Delegates nominated Mr. Thomas Fay. So did the Delegates from the Eighth Ward. A nomination being called for from the Ninth Ward, the Chairman named Mr. Philip [illegible], Mr. [illegible] coinciding with that nomination.

An adjournment was moved and carried, until next Monday evening, at the same place and hour, which [illegible] satisfactory to the Chairman.

THE SIXTH SENATORIAL DISTRICT NOMINATION.

The Sixth Senatorial District Convention met last evening at 8 o'clock at Smith's Hotel, corner of Fourth-avenue and Twenty-seventh-street.

Organized by calling Mr. M. [illegible] to the Chair, and appointed Messrs. McIntyre and A. J. Smith Secretaries.

The Convention entered at once into a ballot for nomination for Senator from their District. Following was the result of the nominations for Senator:

Names.	No. Votes.
Thomas J. Mundy, (Fifteenth Ward)	15
James C. Rutherford, (Nineteenth Ward)	6
Charles B. [illegible], (Fifteenth Ward)	4
D. S. [illegible], (Fifteenth Ward)	2
Total	27

Mr. Mundy having received the greatest number of ballots, was announced to be the regularly nominated candidate for State Senator from that District.

On motion, the vote was declared unanimous.

A Committee was appointed to wait upon Mr. Mundy and inform him of his nomination, which, fortunately, was attended with very little difficulty, as Mr. Mundy, with a numerous host of friends, happened to be at the bar in the adjoining room.

Mr. Mundy received the announcement of his nomination with a profound salaam. In response to repeated calls, he ventured on a brief speech, but we haven't room for it. Pity.

Messrs. Hon. F. Arnoux, W. B. Hayes, Geo. Cox, Philip [illegible], and Benjamin Cohen, were appointed Delegates to the Sixth Assembly District Convention of the Hards, to be held on Thursday evening.

THE YOUNG MEN'S COMMITTEE.

The Young Men's Democratic (Hard) General Committee held a meeting at Academy Hall, Broadway, last evening. [illegible] Parker, Esq., occupied the Chair, and John [illegible] acted as Secretary. The Committee proceeded to the consideration of the by-laws heretofore reported, and the same were unanimously adopted.

E. E. [illegible], Esq., of the Ninth Ward, moved the appointment of a Committee of five to prepare and report a series of resolutions endorsing the [illegible] of the Syracuse Hard State Convention, and also the General Committee in the selection of Delegates to the several Nominating Conventions,—the Committee to report at the next meeting. The resolution was adopted, and the Chairman appointed as such Committee, the following named gentlemen: H. J. [illegible], Wm. C. Clover, Wm. King, Chas. M. [illegible], F. H. McElroy.

On motion of Mr. Clover, a Committee of five was appointed to confer and act in conjunction with a Committee of the General Committee and of the Young Men's National Democratic Club, to make the necessary arrangements for a ratification meeting. The following gentlemen were named as such Committee: [illegible], E. A. Marshall, Henry Smith, Arthur D [illegible], and John H. Brady.

No other business was transacted.

The Police Justice Vacancy—"Strikers."

At the approaching election, there is to be chosen a Police Justice, for the District comprising the Eighteenth and Twenty-first Wards, to fill the vacancy of the term commencing Jan. 1, 1856, which was [illegible] by the election of Hon. [illegible] to the office of City Judge. The office is now filled with honor and dignity by Justice Pearcey, who was appointed last Winter by Gov. Clark, and his friends now urge him as the candidate for the same position. During the past two months several attempts have been made by the Whig delegations of the two Wards to effect a nomination, but with no tangible result. The principal opposition to Justice Pearcey is the K. N. candidate, for whom the Twenty-first Ward Committee cast their vote on every ballot, while the Eighteenth [illegible] for the present incumbent.

On Thursday evening of this week, the delegates will again meet in Third-avenue, to perform the duty for which they were selected. It is said that if the K. N. candidate still persists in his opposition, the Convention will adjourn sine die and the Eighteenth Ward Committee will nominate Justice Pearcey.

A third candidate has been named for the post and we hear that a gang of "strikers" finding him abundantly supplied with funds, are cutting it fat on his account.

This "striking" is a species of swindling well worthy to be repaid with free boarding in the prison; and in the First, Third, Fourth and Sixth Wards there are hosts of professors of the art.

Selling Out the Foreigners to the Hards.

It seems to be felt that Mr. Geo. Saunders tried successfully on Saturday night to sell out the Red Republicans to the Hard Shells. He voted indeed against the Resolution committing the meeting to the Hards—but then it would have looked bad to have seen George's hand so plainly in the movement as it would have appeared if he had said Aye to it. It seems, however, that "The Mountain" kept out of the affair. That Association is not so anxious to strike hands with Slavery and swear to perpetuate alliance. Col. Forbes sends us the following, which speaks probably for more than himself:

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

In your report of the meeting at Washington Hall on Saturday, called by Messrs. Robt. J. Walker, John B. Floyd, Geo. N. Saunders, [illegible] and others, I was represented as having been present, which error I beg of you to correct, since I had nothing whatever to do with it.

I must, likewise, on the part of the Society La Montagne, request you to correct the error that that Society attended the meeting at Washington Hall. La Montagne celebrated the 21st of September at North Hoboken in a private manner, and did not go to Washington Hall or in any way whatever mix itself up with that meeting. Your obedient servant, H. FORBES.

NEW-YORK, Sept. 24, 1855.

The Reformers.

A meeting of the the Municipal Reform Committee was held at the New-York University last evening, PETER COOPER Presiding. The following Resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That the increasing taxation of our citizens and the growing reckless and dishonest extravagance in the administration of some of our City affairs operate oppressively on all classes, driving away manufacturers and mechanics, checking building and the growth and prosperity of our City, as well as discrediting its character, and call upon this Committee for renewed and energetic action, and on all who feel an interest in the honor of New-York, to exert themselves to elect good men to office, and more particularly to reelect those who have proved faithful in the discharge of their duties.

Resolved, That the friends of City Reform be requested to convene in their several Wards and Council Districts with all possible dispatch, for the purpose of nominating candidates for Aldermen and Councilmen, and other local officers, of known integrity and ability, without reference to party politics.

Robert T. Haws, Esq., and the Comptrollership.

We cheerfully make the correction of a report alluded to in yesterday's TIMES, which stated that ROBERT T. HAWS, Esq., had declined being a candidate for the office of Comptroller. Mr. HAWS has [illegible] no such statement, but on the contrary, intends to [illegible] to the successor of AZARIAH C. FLAGG.

The Late Convention on Kansas Affairs at Lexington, Missouri.

CHICAGO, Monday, Sept. 24.

An address to the people of the United States from the Committee of the late Convention at Lexington, Missouri, is published. It is quite lengthy, and is devoted to a denunciation of the emigration from Massachusetts and other States, under the management of aid societies, whereby the Kansas-Nebraska law is rendered a dead letter. Such emigration is pronounced without precedent dangerous in the extreme, calculated to circumscribe Slavery to its present limits, and defeat the true intent of the Nebraska bill. In conclusion, it declares that Missouri takes the same position as the Lexington Convention, whence it will not recede. The rejection of Kansas as a Slave State will be regarded as a good result to the South, and the declaration that Slavery is incompatible with a republican form of government, an unequivocal step towards a dissolution of the Union. The address is signed by J. A. NAPTON, late Supreme Judge; STERLING PRICE, the present Governor of Missouri; MORDECAI OLIVER, Member of Congress, and L. M. WOODSON, a prominent lawyer. Ex-Governor AUSTIN A. KING refused to sign it for some unknown reason.

Great Battle Between United States Troops and Indians.

ST. LOUIS, Monday, Sept. 24.

A great battle took place on the 3d inst., at Sand Hills, near the North fork of the Platte River, between the Sioux Indians and the entire force of United States troops under General HARNEY, numbering about 450 men.

Major CADY commanded the Infantry, and Colonel COOK the dragoons, mounted infantry and artillery.

The battle commenced early in the morning, and lasted several hours. The Indians fought desperately, but were routed. A running fight for some ten miles followed, during which the Indians made a stand and fought with much gallantry. They were, however, defeated, with the loss of eighty men killed and fifty women and children taken prisoners. The Indian women fought furiously. General HARNEY lost six killed and as many wounded. No officers were killed.

The Indians engaged in this battle were the Brule and Sioux—the same that massacred Lieut. GRATTAN'S command, and murdered a mail party—the way bill of the mail having been found with them.

GREAT ACCIDENT IN ALBANY.

Fall of the State-street Bridge.

Over One Hundred People Precipitated into the Basin.

NARROW ESCAPES.

From the Argus, Sept. 24.

Yesterday, about noon, an alarm of fire was raised in consequence of the ignition of a quantity of tar on board a canal-boat lying in the Basin, near the eastern end of the bridge, north side. Some workmen, we learn, were engaged in caulking a boat and caused a fire to be made to heat a boiler, in the bow end of the boat, in which the pitch was prepared.

A very large crowd soon collected on the bridge, among the number many firemen, as well as citizens, strangers, and men and women and children. Not less than one hundred were crowded upon the extreme northeast span of the bridge, when, with a sudden crash, the northeastern foot path was dragged by the great weight from the abutment, and fell into the water, a distance of twenty feet, with all its human freight. Those who were spectators of the scene aver that not less than one hundred were crowded on the space, yet, so far as is at present known, no lives were lost. As the portion of the bridge fell, a part struck the bow of a canal boat lying next the bridge and several were thrown upon the boat. Under the bridge, fortunately, was a number of "floats"—such as are used by caulkers—and several small boats, and which served in a measure to keep the timbers of the bridge afloat until those upon them made good their escape. The panic caused was frightful—men, women and children being huddled together in great confusion amidst the greatest consternation, and quite a number being cast into the water.

Miraculously as it may appear, but two or three were severely injured, and none, so far as can be learned, fatally. WILLIAM WELLER, a policeman attached to the second police district, who went down with the bridge, was severely bruised, though no bones were broken, his injuries resulting from being crushed under the weight of others thrown upon him.

A Mr. TURNER, residing at No. 57 Lumber-street, had an arm broken, besides being severely bruised. He complained of great pain in the side and back. Drs. MARCH, SWINBURNE and COGSWELL were early on the ground, and ministered to his sufferings. He was placed on a litter and taken to his home.

A female, a servant of Capt. CONNER, whose craft was at the east side of the pier, was on the bridge, and with a child in her arms, went down with it. Both escaped without any material injury.

Among others who went down were Mr. TAYLOR, a cartman, JACOB and PETER MOORE, and a young man, son of LYMAN J. LLOYD, all of whom, fortunately, escaped with skin-bruises only.

Eight or ten hats, unclaimed, were found floating in the water and on the wreck of the bridge, which, at first, induced the belief that many were drowned, though the impression subsequently gained currency that all had escaped, the owners of the hats and caps, in their joy at escape, having hastened away from the scene.

An Englishman, with a child some six years old, both of whom went down with the bridge, and were completely [illegible] with [illegible] that [illegible] were soiled, and was almost inconsolable at the loss of "'is 'at." It was, he said, "'an hout-rage, and 'e'd sue the bridge, 'e would."

It is generally believed that all escaped death, as diligent search was made with grappling irons, but nothing recovered.

State-street bridge, many of our readers will recollect, fell on the 18th day of August, 1840, when no less than twenty lives were lost.

The bridge is built of iron and wood, and has not been considered a very safe structure. One of the braces which run above the level or foot-path of the bridge, was cracked by the intense cold weather of last Winter, and it was at this point the bridge gave way.

The part which fell was about 60 feet of the north east footpath, the eastern end of which rested on the pier.

It is to be hoped, and it is a hope often expressed, but never realized, that the Pier Company will at once put each of the three bridges spanning the basin in good and safe repair. The Columbia-street bridge is not, in the opinion of many, safe for natural exigences, and it is a well-known truth that the frail structure at the foot of Columbia-street is hardly safe for foot passengers.

As the Supreme Court recently decided that the Pier Company must keep the bridge in good repair, let the Company at once proceed to render the duty they owe to the public, to the welfare of those compelled daily to cross these bridges, that we are not compelled to chronicle a more disastrous calamity than befell those on the bridge yesterday. A similar crowd is likely to be convoked at most any moment, and delays are dangerous.

THE BURLINGTON TRAGEDY.

Indictment by the Grand Jury.

The Burlington County (N. J.) Grand Jury, which commenced its session at the Court House in Mount Holly on Tuesday last, submitted on Saturday evening the result of their labors. They presented a bill for manslaughter against the engineer, ISRAEL ADAMS. The Grand Jury also presented a bill against JABEZ [illegible], ticket agent at the Burlington Railroad Depot, who stands charged with keeping a watch and some money, the property of Mr. LOVELAND, of the firm of LOVELAND, [illegible] & Co., of Illinois, whose body, it will be recollected, remained at the Lyceum several days unrecognized, and was claimed by several persons. There was no bill found against Dr. HEINEKEN, or against the Railroad Company except so far as the Company may be implicated by the finding of the bill against the engineer.

We understand that Dr. HEINEKEN went before the Grand Jury and entered a complaint against the Camden and Amboy Railroad Company, and charged the conductor, engineer and brakeman of that train with negligence in not giving an alarm,—by blowing the whistle or ringing the bell at a distance of 300 yards from the crossing, as required by the law of New-Jersey, and continue the same until passing over the crossing,—thereby coming in contact with his team, and causing the accident and loss of life of twenty-four persons, and injuring many others. A counter complaint was entered against Dr HEINEKEN by PETER SHREEVE, one of the passengers on that day, who resides at Bordentown, and is a relative of the engineer, ISRAEL ADAMS, for the purpose of introducing rebutting testimony.

Judge POTTS presided over the Court, assisted by Judges HAYWOOD, BURR, STEWART and LIPPINCOTT.

The following is a list of the Grand Jurors:

JONATHAN J. [illegible], Foreman.

Thomas Milnor,	Joseph W. Allen,	John Chambers,
Robert B. [illegible],	John W. Fenimore,	George B. Deacon,
Samuel [illegible],	Daniel Wills,	Michael Forsythe,
W. Dey Newbold,	Wm. M. [illegible],	Joseph Roberts,
Wm. B. [illegible],	Wm. F. Kaighn,	Joel Haines,
A. B. [illegible],	Jesse B. Sears,	Wm. A Shreve,
Theo. B. Phillips,	Wm. H. Keeler,	Charles J. Bates.

From Demerara.

By the arrival of the schooner Earl Dundonald we have received later intelligence from Demerara. The yellow fever had broken out with great virulence at the Island of Barbadoes—the deaths there amounting to thirty a day. Demerara was healthy. The new sugar crop had just commenced, and a large number of vessels were lying in the Demerara River, waiting for cargoes. Dissatisfaction prevailed throughout the Colony at the refusal of the Home Government to sanction the proposed arrangement for a free interchange of commodities between Canada and the West Indies.

From Bermuda.

The Bermudian states that on the [illegible] August a sealed bottle drifted ashore, at Bailey's Bay, containing a paper, on which was written:

Bottle Paper, U. S. steamer John Hancock, 1 P. M., June 28, 1853. Latitude N. 34° 56', longitude W. 35° 30'.

Whoever finds this will please forward it to Lieut. M. F. MAURY, Superintendent of the National Observatory, Washington, D. C., United States of America, with a statement of the latitude and longitude wherein found. (Signed,) WM KING BRIDGE, Acting Lieut. U. S. N.

From British Guiana.

There is nothing new to report. The Demerara Gazette has an article on the trade of the Colony with the United States from which we take the following extracts:

It has hitherto been a matter of complaint in this Colony, that while we imported largely the produce of the United States, they took nothing from us in return. The trade was carried on in a one-sided fashion, in which there was not the slightest reciprocity.

The Americans received payment in specie, and then sailed away to one of the Spanish Colonies, where they took in their cargoes of sugar, which they paid for with the specie drained away from British Guiana. The reason assigned for this was, that the return trade was prevented by the high price of our produce.

Happily, however, the equalization of the duty upon all sugars has done away with the advantage which the slave countries had heretofore enjoyed. The United States merchants are now exhibiting a disposition to buy in our markets, and to try the effect of a barter-trade, in the place of carrying away specie alone from us.

If our planters can supply them with produce at a fair price which shall be remunerative to the shippers, and the experiment should succeed, there is every reason to hope that a very considerable and profitable trade might spring up between this colony and the States.

This new and improved state of things has already commenced. The schooner Meteor, which has just sailed for New-York, has on board a cargo consisting of 187 hogsheads, 6 tierces, and 280 barrels of sugar, and three barrels of plantain fibre. And we hear that there are orders in the colony for 5,000 hogsheads of sugar, of which about 2,000 have already been purchased. The prices given are very satisfactory to the grower.

The Westchester County (N. Y.) Agricultural Society.

This Society will hold their annual exhibition at White Plains on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week. Arrangements are making to have a variety of agricultural implements in actual operation, and an address will be delivered on the closing day by SAMUEL E. LYON, Esq., of White Plains.

The Westchester Herald throws cold water on the enterprise, because the officers thought best to get their printing done in New-York, and, to counteract the influence of the Herald, the managers are stirring themselves to get up a better exhibition than usual—a very effectual way to do it.

Shipwreck of an American Schooner.

The Washington Union publishes the following extract of a letter from the Acting Consul of the United States at Turks Island, dated Sept 1:

"I have the honor to announce the shipwreck and loss of the American schooner Cicero, belonging to Baltimore, RICHARD DUDLEY master, which occurred on the 27th ultimo, on Burchis Lookout Reef, off the west Caicos, being bound from New-York to Aspinwall, New Granada, with an assorted cargo of provisions, &c., the greater portion of which has been saved dry, and brought to this port. It will be sold at an early period for the benefit of all concerned."

GREAT EXCITEMENT IN THE COMMUNITY.

BAIL TENDERED AND RECEIVED.

Specific Charges of Bribery—The Indictments in Full—How our City is Governed—How the Indicted Stand It.

The City was alive yesterday with the news that the Aldermen and Councilmen, indicted for bribery by the late Grand Jury, had procured bail, and would offer the same at the Recorder's Chambers. The news was true. Yesterday forenoon the accused appeared before Recorder SMITH, and were admitted to bail, each in the sum of $2,500.

We append the indictments in full, from the originals in the possession of the District Attorney. It will be seen that Alderman Herrick is charged under two indictments, one for entertaining a proposition to receive money in the Joseph Walker case, another for receiving $100 for his vote in favor of modifying the grade of Eighty-sixth-street. Alderman Drake was similarly implicated in the Joseph Walker case. Alderman Moser was charged with entertaining a proposition to receive $1,000 for his vote in furtherance of the same suit. Against the implicated Councilmen there were [illegible] charges, which may be read in full in the subjoined indictments:

The first indictment against Alderman Herrick was as follows:

COUNCILMAN HEALY'S CARD.

To the Public.

The undersigned having been made the victim of a gross and outrageous charge of bribery by the late Grand Jury of this City in being indicted for [illegible] in office, represents to his friends and the public that it is a vile calumny against his character, and entirely devoid of truth in every particular. [illegible] I am prepared to prove the whole charge false, and trust that judgment will be suspended until an opportunity is afforded me to establish my innocence in the matter.

BARTH. HEALY,
Councilman, Sixth District.

Alderman Drake has sent us the following Card:

NEW-YORK, Monday, Sept. 24, 1855.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

Having been published to the world as being indicted by that secret body, known as a "Grand Jury," for an attempt at malfeasance in office, I hasten to appear before the public through your valuable journal in my own defence. The ex parte evidence upon which the indictment was found against me was given by only one witness, who is [illegible] Walter R. Jones, the famous contractor to raise the Joseph Walker. So far as this Jones has sworn to any "proposition" relative to my requesting a bribe, I pronounce them maliciously false, and were only premeditated to injure me with my constituents.

I do not know this Walter R. Jones, except that I was introduced to him one evening while in company with several friends. I never talked with him about his contract, nor was there ever a word passed between us in regard to "influence," bribery, or any other matters, unless in a jocular manner, as I shall prove. I trust the community will suspend their opinion until I can have a fair opportunity to show my innocence in open Court. Respectfully yours, WM. B. DRAKE,
Alderman of Twenty-second Ward.

MESSAGE FROM THE MAYOR.

His Honor Sharp on the Common Council.

THE ALDERMEN.

The Mayor sent a Message to the Common Council last evening, informing the two Boards that certain members of each body had been indicted for malfeasance in office.

The reception of the Message and the personal explanations which followed it, caused the evening to be unusually spicy.

MAYOR'S MESSAGE.

MAYOR'S OFFICE, NEW-YORK, Sept. 24, 1855.

To the Honorable The Board of Aldermen:

GENTLEMEN—I enclose a copy of a communication made to me this day by A. OAKEY HALL, Esq., District Attorney of the City, stating that indictments have been found by the Grand Jury against certain members of your body, for corrupt practices in the discharge of their official duties. However painful and humiliating it is to me to make this communication, and for you to receive it, still we owe a duty to the public from which we must not shrink, effect whom it may. Your body should not only be purged of every corrupt member, who may hold a place among you, but the utmost penalty of the law should be inflicted against every man thus guilty. This community has [illegible] its own officials long enough. No attempt at reform, to reduce the expenditures, to raise the standard of the character of office, and to improve the character of the government of the city, will continue futile so long as the legislative branch is impure and unfaithful. From a corrupt fountain nothing but contamination can flow. A common council without integrity, being the source and origin of the ordinances, will not fail to impart its own spirit to those who are to execute its proceedings, until the whole machinery of government will speedily become rotten and demoralized. It is the conviction of honest men that in the management of our public affairs we are fast progressing to this lamentable state of degradation. In my opinion, public indignation cannot be much longer suppressed. We are approaching a crisis when the general cry will be "Reformation or Revolution." New-York, so strong, so proud, so opulent, in all that constitutes commercial fame, hard earned wealth and exalted social position, cannot, with all her greatness, long resist the gnawings of this foul canker, working thus steadily at her municipal heart. I beseech you, therefore, to make common cause in a common effort, without reference to party considerations or personal animosities, to redeem, if possible, the fair fame of our City from the load of official depravity which is now bearing it down.

Very respectfully,
FERNANDO WOOD, Mayor.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY'S COMMUNICATION.

The message was accompanied by the following communication from District Attorney HALL:

DISTRICT ATTORNEY'S OFFICE,
NEW-YORK, Sept. 24, 1855.

SIR—In answer to your note of this morning, asking if I am at liberty to give official information touching the rumors against gentlemen connected with the municipal government; I have to say that the following members of the Common Council have given bail to answer respective indictments against them for bribery:

Aldermen	Councilmen
Herrick,	Healy,
Drake,	Wendell,
Moser,	Cooper.

These indictments are on file in the office of the Clerk of the Court of General Sessions.

With great respect, your obedient servant,
A. OAKEY HALL.

To His Honor the Mayor.

HOW THE ALDERMEN RECEIVED IT.

Immediately after the reading of these documents, a solemn stillness pervaded the Chamber of the Board. Neither the lobby, nor the members, nor the Clerk, nor the President, nor the newspaper Reporters, made any sign. After a pause of nearly two minutes,

Alderman ELY rose. He said: I am at a loss to know what motion to make, for the purpose of disposing of the communication from His Honor the Mayor, which has just been read. But the presentation of such a paper is undoubtedly a correct proceeding on the part of His Honor. I suppose it to be perfectly in order for the Mayor to send a communication of this nature, although every member of this Board is undoubtedly fully aware of the particular matters to which allusion is made. I consider, however, Sir, that I, as one member of this Board, would have been better pleased if His Honor had signified in what way the members of this Board or any portion of them could aid him in purging either the legislative authorities of this City, or any of the Executive Boards or Departments, of any members who are corrupt; and [illegible]

[illegible] ple vice—human or other wise. I ask only that they [illegible] The Mayor of this City, Sir, [illegible] been elected to this Board [illegible] for every corrupt measure [illegible] Sir, I defy the Mayor [illegible] a single instance in which [illegible] a vote for any corrupt measure. My votes [illegible] on all Reform [illegible] as those of well-known Reformers—the [illegible] as those of CHAUNCEY, and VOORHIS, and LORD [illegible] others, who were elected specially as Reformers. [illegible] Alderman proceeded further to justify himself. He added: In regard to the matters now before us, [illegible] let us set the doors and windows wide open, and if we find anything foul, let us brand those whom we find contaminated. Let not the whole Common Council be brought into ill-odor. If there are any corrupt persons, let us ferret them out. If you will allow me, [illegible] I will make a motion that the communication from His Honor the Mayor be entered at length upon the [illegible] and that the District Attorney be requested to [illegible] before the first Grand Inquest that [illegible] be held.

ALDERMAN HERRICK MAKES A SPEECH—PLEADS "NOT GUILTY."

Alderman HERRICK, of the Nineteenth Ward—one of [illegible] indicted [illegible] rose to a personal explanation. The Alderman said:

[illegible] of the second portion, Mr. President, I rise to [illegible] of privilege. Certain members of this [illegible] These [illegible] by the [illegible] If it [illegible] I have [illegible] a Committee of the Board [illegible] to take that course; but none of the investigations yet commenced have been completed. I am ready to answer before the tribunal which has cognizance of the charges against me. As yet, however, I do not know what are the charges against me. I feel, however, that my colleagues around this Board appear to have [illegible] the old maxim of believing a man innocent until he is proved guilty. They seem to consider us guilty until we are proved innocent. I don't see why [illegible] of law should have been so inverted. [illegible] my membership in this Board, I have endeavored [illegible] my constituents. I can say [illegible] that I have tried to do my duty. Whatever [illegible] brought against me, I am ready to meet [illegible] tribunal. It has been proposed that I [illegible] for the present from the deliberations of this [illegible]. But I beg my colleagues to accord to me the [illegible] privilege that the law allows that I may be [illegible] to be innocent, until I shall have been proved guilty.

Alderman LORD thought that the course which it was [illegible] for the Board to pursue was very simple. He was not aware that there was anything which required the action of a Committee at present.

ALDERMAN MOORE'S EXPLANATION—HE IS DOWN ON THE MAYOR.

Alderman MOORE, of the Third Ward—No. 2 of the indicted—said:

MR. PRESIDENT: I appear to be one of the individuals who, through the influence of the Mayor, have been brought before a tribunal on a charge of criminal practice. And I wish it to be distinctly understood that although I was not elected to this Board as a Reformer, I [illegible] as honest a man as any Reformer in this Board. I [illegible] here, Sir, (striking his breast,) [illegible] an honest man. The charges that have been [illegible] against me are the result of a conspiracy. The indictment which has been found against [illegible] upon the same evidence as that which concerned the Mayor and the Joseph Walker case. There is nothing particularly new in that evidence, but it grows out of the same affair. Mr. WALTER R. JONES has changed his testimony somewhat; but how any Grand Jury, claiming to possess the responsibility of men, could find an indictment upon the testimony given by Walter R. Jones, I am at a loss to know. A Committee of this Board, Sir, is already investigating [illegible], so far as Alderman HOFFMIRE is concerned, and I ask as a particular favor, that that Committee [illegible] report, in order that that matter may be settled. My character, Mr. President, stands [illegible] the public. I have friends who have known me [illegible] forty years. I have never had my character affected by the charges of any man. In this case, Sir, [illegible] the Mayor [illegible] all; it is all [illegible] for political purposes. That is all I have to say.

ALDERMAN DRAKE MODESTLY RETIRES.

Alderman DRAKE, of the Twenty-second Ward, was the third and last explanatory speaker. He said: I suppose, Sir, to be one of the unfortunate beings who have been pronounced dishonest and corrupt. There are several of us in the ship which has set sail to-day. I [illegible] a very few words to say. I most earnestly [illegible] a searching investigation into the charges which have been brought against me. I want every stone turned over. I never met Mr. WALTER R. JONES, Mr. President, but once, and that was in [illegible], in Broadway, where I talked with him at the bar-room. I say bar-room, Mr. President, for the benefit of some who object to passing by such places even. There was a considerable number of persons there at the time. Jones was introduced to me. He said he would have given $1,000 if a certain publication had not been made in the newspapers of Sunday. It was said by somebody that it could be [illegible] for $500. I said to him, "In making your distribution, don't forget DRAKE." That was all there was of it. I am a man, Mr. President, who likes his joke, who has his own way of joking and little learned [illegible] I have yet to learn that a man's private conversation is to be turned into a criminal complaint against him.

After a pause,

Ald. DRAKE rose again and stated to the Board that he should for the present only claim the privilege of being present as a citizen. He should decline to take any further part in the proceedings of the Board, until further advised.

Ald. LORD said this movement was entirely consonant with custom, that it met his hearty concurrence, and called upon the Aldermen of the Nineteenth and Third Wards for explanations.

Ald. HERRICK declined to retire. He had not voted during the evening, nor should he do so this evening. He desired to take the advice of friends.

Ald. MOORE was of the same mind.

Ald. LORD did not press the matter.

The communication of the Mayor was laid on the table, ordered to be entered at length in the minutes [illegible] printed.

THE WORKMEN'S PETITIONS—NO MONEY IN THE TREASURY.

Alderman WAKEMAN, from the Law Committee, made the following important report:

The Committee on the Law Department, to whom was referred the communication from the Comptroller, bearing date Aug. 14, 1855, respectfully

REPORT:

The legal questions contained in the Comptroller's communication arise upon the following facts:

In December, 1854, the Common Council passed an ordinance making the annual appropriations for the support of the City Government for the current year, to wit, from the 1st of January to the 31st of December, 1855. These appropriations were based on "specific and detailed statements," made by the heads of the several Departments, of the various sums of money [illegible] be required by them respectively during the current year.

The Corporation not possessing the power to levy taxes, application was made to the Legislature in behalf of the Supervisors of the County for authority to [illegible] the several sums of money thus appropriated, by taxation, in accordance with which application, an act was duly passed, (Laws of 1855, p. 232,) coupled with a provision that the several sums of money thus raised should be exclusively appropriated to the objects specifically designated.

By this act the sum of $500,000, in round numbers, [illegible] to be raised and expended in support of [illegible] of the City Government administered [illegible] the Department of Repairs and Supplies and [illegible] for the entire current year.

[illegible] the first six months of the time for which this provision was made had scarcely elapsed, before the head of this department had expended the entire appropriation, and had incurred obligations amounting to about $100,000 in excess. In August last the Common Council passed an ordinance appropriating the further sum of $120,000 for the support of this department.

By the 12th Section of the Charter of 1853, the Common Council are prohibited from borrowing, on the credit of the Corporation, any money whatever, except in anticipation of the revenue of the year in which [illegible] be made.

By section five of the ordinance making the annual appropriations of the year, the Comptroller is authorized to borrow from time to time, on the credit of the Corporation in anticipation of its revenues, and not [illegible] such revenues, such sums as may [illegible] to meet expenditures under the appropriations [illegible].

Upon these facts, three important questions are presented for the consideration of your Committee.

I. Was the Common Council legally competent to [illegible] the ordinance of August last, appropriating [illegible] or any other sum for the support of the Department of Repairs and Supplies for the present current year, ending the 31st of December, 1855?

II. [illegible] the Common Council was legally competent to pass such an ordinance, then could the Comptroller, on the credit of the Corporation, during the current year, legally borrow the money thus appropriated for the Department of Repairs and Supplies this [illegible] at about $500,000.

4. By Section 8 of the act authorizing the annual tax for the year 1855, (Laws of 1855, p. 232,) it is provided that "no portion of the said respective sums hereinbefore named, shall be expended or applied to any other purposes or objects than the said objects and purposes respectively, for which the Board of Supervisors, of said City and County of New-York, are hereinbefore empowered to raise the same as aforesaid."

From these considerations, the Committee conclude that the Common Council cannot make appropriations exceeding those annually provided in the Tax Bill during the current year.

The Committee also conclude that the Comptroller cannot, during the current year, legally borrow the money thus appropriated upon the credit of the Corporation. They say: As the borrowing is confined to the amount of the revenue of the year in which the loan was made, and as the revenue for this Department for the current year was $500,000, and as this sum has been borrowed and expended, it follows of course that no further sum can be raised for this department for the year, and until it is authorized by the next annual appropriation and tax bill. It is evident, therefore, that the Comptroller, on behalf of the Corporation, has no authority whatever to borrow the money to meet the appropriation at any time during the current year.

III. Under the third inquiry, your Committee, in conclusion, beg leave to make the following suggestions:

The sum of $500,000 was authorized to be expended by the Common Council through this Department for the current year by the eighteenth section above quoted; and the head of this Department could not legally expend one dollar of this fund until it had been appropriated by the Common Council.

By the [illegible], it can make no difference whether the Common Council shall have ordered the [illegible] the appropriation [illegible] communication from the Law Department, Sept. 6, 1855.) The Commissioner of Repairs and Supplies is the disbursing officer of this Department. An intelligent acquaintance with the duties of his office would have shown him that the sum of $500,000 was the entire capital of the fund to be expended through his Department for the whole year. He should have made his arrangements accordingly, and in his monthly reports, which, by the Charter, he is required to make, should have acquainted the Common Council with the precise state of the fund. Whether any portion of this fund has been expended without a prior appropriation, your Committee are ignorant. But the fact that the entire fund has been exhausted within a half of the year, and an indebtedness of $120,000 contracted, is sufficiently significant in the judgment of your Committee to authorize a rigid examination into the accounts and expenditures of that Department.

If it should appear that any portion of this fund has been expended without having been first appropriated to the specific object for which it was expended, it can be recovered in the above manner, as the money of any other principal expended by the agent without the principal's authority.

By the twenty-first section of the Charter of 1849, "every Head of Department shall report in writing to the Common Council at the commencement of each stated session [the first Monday of each month,] the state of his Department, with such suggestions in relation to the improvement thereof, and to the public business connected therewith, as he may deem advisable."

Your Committee regret that this department, as well as most of the others, have failed to comply with this salutary and important provision of the Charter.

A monthly and detailed report of the financial condition of this department would have kept the Common Council informed of the balance remaining unexpended, and the objects and manner in which the various disbursements had previously been made.

These remarks apply with equal force to each of the other departments of the City Government.

In conclusion, the Committee offered for adoption the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the Common Council have no authority to make any appropriation whatever for the support of the department of repairs and supplies in excess of the amount provided by chapter of the Laws of 1855, commonly designated as the annual tax bill.

Resolved, That the Comptroller has no power whatever to issue revenue bonds in order to provide funds in support of the department of repairs and supplies in excess of the amount of revenue authorized to be raised and expended for the current year by the ordinance of the Common Council and the annual tax statute passed January, 1855.

3. Resolved, That the Heads of the respective Departments of the City Government be, and they are hereby, requested to report to this Board at the commencement of each monthly session, a detailed statement of the financial condition of his Department with such suggestions in relation thereto as he may deem advisable, pursuant to section 21 of the Charter of 1849.

4. Resolved, That a Committee of three be appointed to make a detailed investigation into the financial condition and affairs generally of the Department of Repairs and Supplies and the several Bureaus thereof, and that said Committee have power to send for persons and papers, and report to this Board with all convenient speed.

GRADING.

JOSEPH WALKER AGAIN.

One John G. Winrees petitioned to be refunded $207 for damages sustained by him because he was compelled to stop work on the now famous Joseph Walker. The petitioner was employed by Capt. Lewis and James Condon, to watch about the wreck, and by the dispossession of his his employers, he was thrown out of work. The petition was referred to the Board of Councilmen.

Comptroller FLAGG found it necessary again to call the special attention of the Common Council to the fact that the sum of $3,712 86 was paid to Dr. Downing for work done under and approved by the late City Inspector, Dr. White, on the 26th of January, 1853, on account of items on lots, and the necessary papers for reimbursing the Treasury, made out by the present City Inspector, appear to have passed down to that bourne from which no collections are returned to the Treasury.

Dr. Downing stated, in reply to a query from the Comptroller, that he sent all the returns to the Street Commissioner. The Street Commissioner, on the other hand, declares, in answer to another query, that he has not received any such documents. So the Comptroller comes again to the Board for redress.

The Comptroller considers it important that this matter be thoroughly sifted by a Committee of the Common Council; and solicits the Board to take the matter in hand and ascertain, if practicable, where the missing returns are, and obtain such facts as will enable the City to reimburse the Treasury for these advances.

He asks:

Can Dr. White and Dr. Downing both be mistaken in regard to the preparation and disposition of documents on which depended the collection, more or less, of more than $100,000. Can the charge of these two Departments in January, 1853, furnish any excuse for the disappearance of records involving an expenditure of $40,000.

BOARD OF COUNCILMEN.

A TROUBLOUS TIME.

Letters and Statements of the Indicted Councilmen.

They are Invited to Absent themselves from the Board.

THE MAYOR VETOES THE CITY CHARTER.

The Board of Councilmen met yesterday, pursuant to adjournment, at 5 o'clock P. M., the President, D. D. CONOVER, Esq., in the Chair. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and approved,

WHAT COUNCILMAN COOPER THOUGHT OF IT.

Mr. C. S. COOPER presented a communication, which he desired to have read to the Board. It was, in part, a copy found against him by the late Grand Jury, in the Court of Sessions, which was followed by the subjoined letter by Mr. COOPER himself.

To the Honorable the Board of Councilmen of the City of New-York:

GENTLEMEN—Being a member of your Honorable body, and elected for the XXIIId Council District of the City, for the term of one year from the 1st day of January, 1855, to the 1st day of January, 1856, and my term being yet unexpired, I consider it my duty to inform you, officially, that the late Grand Jury for September Term, have filed, through their foreman, Luther C. Carter, a bill of indictment against me in the following words:

CITY AND COUNTY OF NEW-YORK, ss.—The Jurors of the People of the State of New-York, in and for the body of the City and County of New-York, upon their oath present:

That Cornelius S. Cooper, late of the Ninth Ward of the City of New-York, in the County of New-York aforesaid, on the first day of February, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five, at the Ward, City and County aforesaid, with force and arms, then and there being and acting as a member of the Common Council of the City of New-York aforesaid, to wit: in his capacity as Councilman for the Twenty-third District of said City, and for a long time, theretofore, being such member, and at the date of this presentment still so being and so being as such member aforesaid, did then and there wilfully, corruptly, unlawfully, and [illegible], in his capacity as member aforesaid, make and entertain a proposition to one Peter Palm then and there, being for a certain gift of money to him, the said Cornelius S. Cooper, given from him, the said Peter Palm, to wit: for the gift of five hundred dollars as a motive for the official influence of him, the said Cornelius S. Cooper, as member of the Common Council aforesaid, in a particular manner, to wit: in favor of releasing him, the said Peter Palm, from the conditions of a certain contract for cleaning the streets of the Eleventh Ward, which he, the said Peter Palm, had theretofore duly entered into with the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New-York, the said matter of releasing him, the said Peter Palm from the contract aforesaid then and there duly pending before the Board of Councilmen of the City of New-York as a body duly convened, whereof he, the said Cornelius S. Cooper, was a member as aforesaid and he the said Councilman Cooper, then and there well knowing that such matter aforesaid was, then and there, pending, as aforesaid against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace of the people of the State of New-York, and their dignity.

A. OAKEY HALL, District Attorney.

Being thus under an accusation made by the Grand Jury, I deem it no matter less than an act of justice to myself as to your honorable body that you should be fully apprised of the accusation against me, and I wish that your honorable body would take such action in the matter as you in your wisdom may deem meet.

Could I believe that the [illegible] indictment was found against me for any offence, penal or moral, I should ask to be entirely suspended from any connection officially with our honorable body while such indictment is pending; but whatever the character of the accusation may be, I shall take immediate measures to have a fair, free, open and legal investigation made before a competent judicial tribunal touching all the matters charged in the indictment, and for the sake of disproving the truth in the accusation made, I shall deem it my duty to communicate to you all legal evidence which shall be taken in the case, for your future action.

I am aware, and have been for some time past, of the efforts made by our present Mayor to bring accusations against different members of our Common Council, and this accusation has been made by him, and through him to the Grand Jury, as I have been informed and believe, and that papers were sent from his office to the Grand Jury in relation to this matter, which are not on file in the office of the District Attorney.

I have been, and have been, Chairman of the Standing Committee on Cleaning Streets of your honorable body. I have found it my duty as such Chairman and a member of this Committee to report against employing the street sweeping machines under the contract which was present to your Board for ratification, because of informality. Peter Palm, made use of for procuring this indictment, had a contract with the Corporation to clean streets in the Eleventh Ward, and has been released, as I am told, by the Comptroller of the City, Mr Flagg, within a short time past; but this complainant says that he has never had any influence, either directly or indirectly with the Comptroller, by person or otherwise, to cause said contract to be canceled; nor has he been guilty of any of the facts charged in the indictment, and were it not that the forum in of the late Grand Jury, who administered the oath to the witness in this case, is now, and has been for some months, not to say years past, an inhabitant and resident of Queens County, Long Island, and incompetent to sit and act as a Grand Juror, Peter Palm would be immediately indicted for perjury, and his aiders and abettors put into the same category.

Mr. Luther C Carter, the foreman of the Grand Jury, who has presented the bill against me, is an inhabitant and resident of Queens County; and while I am held up to the public by indictment, charging no offence, this indictment is filed against me by a foreman, acting under an usurped jurisdiction contrary to law.

All such objections I waive, and demand and court a full and free investigation of all matters which are in any manner connected with the preceding accusation. I shall take measures forthwith to bring all the facts connected with this subject both in the Mayor's office and out of it before the public.

CORNELIUS S. COOPER.

No 6 Ninth avenue, Councilman Twenty-third district.
NEW YORK Sept. 24, 1855.

COUNCILMAN WILD'S RESOLUTION.

After the reading of the foregoing, Mr. WILD offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the communication of Councilman COOPER just read, be referred to a Special Committee of this Board, and that said Committee have power to take testimony thereon and report the evidence to this Board.

The Chairman remarked that the resolution was out of order. Still he supposed that there would be no objection to its acceptance at this time.

Councilman MATHER wished to know what course Councilman WILD intended to pursue. He likewise wished to take some action in this matter.

WHAT COUNCILMAN WANDELL HAD TO SAY.

Councilman WANDELL had something to say on the indictment by the Grand Jury, in which he was included. He had been that day held forth in an ex parte manner before the whole community. He now in his place, pronounced the whole thing maliciously false, from beginning to end. He stood there as a man who had done his duty to his constituents in an honorable manner. It would ill become him, there, to state what course he intended to pursue in regard to the matter. He cared not how soon an investigation might take place, for he was ready for a most full, most free investigation into the matter. In company with the other gentlemen indicted, he was pursued by certain parties who were endeavoring to ruin his moral character. He should feel it to be his duty, following legal advice, to take, henceforward, no part or lot in the proceedings of the Board until an investigation could be had into his case, which should result either in an acquittal or condemnal. He should retain his seat, however, since his constituents had no right to elect his successor until he was proved guilty. But he would refrain from acting or voting, as a member of that body. He would also decline acting as Chairman of the Finance Committee.

MR. HEALY'S LETTER.

Councilman HEALY then, on his part, as one of the accused, presented the following letter to the Chair:—

MR. PRESIDENT: Having been indicted by the Grand Jury of the City and County of New-York, for malfeasance of office, I beg to state that the charges made against me are false in every particular, as I shall be able to prove before a jury of disinterested citizens; but at the same time, while feeling perfectly innocent of the charges against me, a proper self respect for myself and fellow members of the Board, constrains me to decline all participation in the proceedings of this Board, until I shall have the opportunity to meet the charges brought against me, and prove myself entirely innocent of the crime laid to my charge.

BARTHOLOMEW HEALY,
Councilman Sixth District.

ALDERMAN COOPER WISHES TO SPEAK.

Alderman COOPER wished to speak, adding something to the contents of his letter. He was determined to have the matter fully investigated. He could not rest until he had set himself right with the public. He hoped, therefore, that the Board would excuse him until that happy time arrived, from serving on committees, and from voting in the proceedings of the Board.

Mr. HARLEY asked that the communication from the Mayor should be read. That document, together with a letter from A. OAKEY HALL, Esq., the District Attorney, was accordingly read to the Board. They were identical with the District Attorney's letter and Mayor's message read to the Board of Aldermen, and our readers will find them in our report of the proceedings of that Board.

COUNCILMAN MATHER'S RESOLUTION.

After some remarks from the Chairman Councilman MATHER rose to address the Board. He said, in reference to Councilman WILD's resolution, that it was the most novel he had ever heard. He had a counter resolution to offer. He thought that the gentleman (WANDELL) who talked of remaining in the Board, might reconsider his determination and abstain in toto from any participation in the proceedings of the Board.

The Chairman thought the speaker had misunderstood the remarks of the gentleman to whom he alluded.

Mr. WANDELL explained that he had stated that while retaining his seat pro formâ, he should take no part in the proceedings of the Board.

Councilman MATHER was glad to receive the explanation. But he did not think that it was advisable to adopt Mr. WILD's resolution. If the accusation were urged to a speedy trial, or the indictments were quashed, it would scarcely, like another resolution, which he would offer, tend to set the gentlemen right upon the record before the people.

Mr. MATHER then offered the following counter resolution:

Resolved, That those members of this Board against whom indictments are now pending, be, and they hereby are permitted to withdraw from all participation in the business of the Board and its committees until judgment shall be had on such indictments, or until further action by the Board in this respect.

He then proceeded to explain his motives for offering this resolution. After which Councilman WILD defended his resolution.

Councilman PURDY would not be willing to have the matter referred to a Special Committee. Such investigations are usually whitewashed affairs. He had not heard that any real charge had been brought against any member of the Board. All the noise was out of doors. He hoped the indicted parties would come out of the ordeal unscathed.

The CHAIRMAN trusted that the whole affair would be allowed to lay over till another night.

After a few remarks from Mr. SEELY, Councilman MATHER said he trusted that the matter would not be deferred. It ought, in justice to all parties, to be disposed of that evening.

Mr. BARNEY moved that the Board should extend its session over one or more nights.

The CHAIRMAN remarked that the motion before the Board was, that the whole question should be laid on the table till Monday, April 1.

It was put to the vote, and lost. Nays 45, ayes 2.

MATHER'S RESOLUTION CARRIED.

The vote was then taken on Councilman MATHER's resolution. Ayes 42, nays 2. This resolution was accordingly carried.

THE MAYOR'S VETO MESSAGE ON THE PROPOSED REVISION OF THE CITY CHARTER.

The following message from the Mayor, vetoing the proposition to appoint a Special Committee to revise the City Charter, was received:

MAYOR'S OFFICE, New-York,
Sept 24, 1855.

To the Honorable the Board of Councilmen:

GENTLEMEN: I return you herewith a preamble and resolutions presented to me for approval, which propose to create a Joint Committee of the two Boards of the Common Council for the purpose of devising a new Charter for the City.

By the 4th section of the amendments to the Charter, passed April 2, 1849, it is provided that "The Two Boards shall have concurrent powers, and a negative on each other's proceedings and shall, in all cases, act as separate bodies, and shall not appoint Joint Committees, except a Committee on Accounts." Therefore, the Common Council have not the power to create Joint Committees for this or any other purpose, except only as it relates to accounts.

I am aware that this resolution by calling, first for the appointment of a Committee by your Board, and then a similar Committee to "confer with it," by the Board of Aldermen seeks to avoid what is termed a Joint Committee, but the wording of the second resolution, in stating that the two Committees may "jointly" make application to the Legislature after having "jointly" agreed upon a Charter, fixes its character clearly within the restriction of the amended Charter referred to.

But, admitting that this objection has been avoided, there are others of sufficient weight to prevent my approval.

One of the peculiar and suspicious features of this proceeding is the last clause of the second resolution, which gives to this joint Committee power to "make application to the Legislature at its next session, for the enactment of the charter," which it is thus empowered to devise, without any submission of it to the Common Council or to the people of the City. I cannot consent to delegate such a power to any committee, however unexceptionable as to ability and character. The men to be selected by the two presiding officers of the present Common Council should not be entrusted with such an important duty, to be performed without check, without supervision, or even without accountability.

Another objection not much less forcible, is that this Committee is authorized to proceed to a Legislature yet to be chosen, when the body it purports to represent must have ceased to have its official existence. The Legislature does not convene before January next, when an entire new Board of Councilmen and new members for one half of the Board of Aldermen will be sitting in the places now filled by the bodies which got up this proceeding. How then could the Joint Committee, with propriety represent the Mayor and Commonalty of New-York at the time its influence is to be exercised.

It is not necessary to state the many difficulties which present themselves to me in the way of this measure. That the Charter should be amended all admit; that it is [illegible] This subject was alluded to in the first communication submitted to the Common Council on the 1st of January last. A portion of the intervening months could have been profitably passed in devising a proper charter, which, after due deliberation and general consultation, would be ready to be presented to the next Legislature for adoption.

It is now too late for this Common Council to take up the subject.

The next Common Council will be "fresh from the people," and, probably, command public confidence to a greater extent. Let the duty of amending the charter be left with your successors.

Very respectfully,
FERNANDO WOOD, Mayor.

The Board, after transacting considerable business of no great public interest, adjourned until Monday next, April 1, at 5 P. M.

The Supervisors.

In the absence of the Mayor yesterday, Ald. BARKER presided at the meeting of the Board of Supervisors. The Mayor and Recorder both absent, no reports could be received; and so, after disposing of a few petitions for remission of tax, $44 worth of legislation was finished, and the Supervisors were resolved into Aldermen.

The Board meet again on Thursday.

The Prohibitory Law.

The number of arrests made yesterday for intoxication was fifty-three.

A NEW THING ENTIRELY, THE MOST ASTONISHING PERFORMANCE HEARD OF! BARRELS, FIRKINS, KEGS AND THE WHOLE COOPER FAMILY MADE AND FINISHED WITHOUT A DEFECT, AIR-TIGHT, AND SMOOTH ENOUGH TO VARNISH, BY MACHINERY. [illegible] ONLY premium on keg and barrel machinery, by Jury B, at the Crystal Palace.
It takes the timber in the bolt, saws the Staves, Hollowing with the grain, cuts them all of equal length, planes both inside and outside perfectly smooth, joints [illegible] giving each Stave its proper proportion of bilge, according to its width, be it wide or narrow, bevels, cuts the croze, forms the heads and prepares the Barrel or Keg for the finishing process, in a manner so perfect, complete and well finished, that we challenge the world to produce a better Barrel, Firkin or Keg than our Machines make at the rate of three hundred per day, to the single set—to which we invite the particular attention of all who choose to give them an inspection.
We manufacture, with our Machine, articles of the Barrel family, from the smallest White Lead Keg to the largest Cask in general use—all of which can be warranted to hold the most subtle liquids, or be adapted to the packing of dry goods. In fact, the machine cannot make an imperfect article, except the defect is exclusively in the timber.
We have a shop at Elmira, New-York, directly on the line of the New-York and Erie Railroad, and the Elmira and Niagara Falls Railroad, five minutes' walk north of the depot, where any persons who wish can witness the operation of these Machines, and test to their perfect satisfaction every branch of the work. We will feel the utmost pleasure in exhibiting to them everything connected with the work.
Persons desirous of purchasing the right and Machines for any locations now unsold, can obtain any information in relation thereto by applying to us through the mail. There are but few of the States remaining unsold; still, applicants will be referred to the present owners, many of whom will, without doubt, hold for disposal desirable locations within their respective Territories. It is conceded by all judges who have examined this Machine, that it surpasses everything that has been or can be invented for the same purpose, and must entirely supersede all hand coopering [illegible]

MAYHEW'S PRACTICAL BOOK-KEEPING,
BY SINGLE AND DOUBLE ENTRY,
WITH A SET OF ACCOUNT BOOKS.
To be used by the Learner in writing up the Examples for Practice contained in the Book-Keeping, and a Key for Teachers, containing their Solution.
BY IRA MAYHEW, A. M.,
Superintendent of Public Instruction in Michigan, Author of a Treatise on Popular Education, &c.

The Publisher would respectfully call the attention of Teachers, School Officers, and the friends of Education generally, to this work, which has been strongly recommended by the principal Book Keepers of extensive Business Houses in New York; by the Superintendent of Common Schools for the City and County of New-York; by the Principal of the New-York Free Academy; by the Principals of the Public Schools generally, and of all the Ward Schools in the City and County of New-York; by the Principals of all the Public Schools of the Cities of Brooklyn and Williamsburg, and by the Teachers generally of other Schools, both public and private, to whose knowledge it has been brought.

Such unanimity and strength of testimony, including the Principals of all the Public Schools of these three cities, is unprecedented; and still this work has been received with equal favor wherever it has become known, having been introduced into the schools of a large number of cities and towns in every part of the United States, within the brief space of three months from its publication, including several female colleges in as many different States, the high schools of a large number of cities, and an almost incredible number of academies and common schools scattered through the fifteen States. It will be observed, also, that teachers who have tested this work in the school room, bear the strongest and most cordial testimony in its favor.

TESTIMONIALS FROM PRACTICAL EDUCATORS.

"'Mayhew's Practical Book-Keeping' is better adapted, in my judgment, to the ordinary business of the great majority of the people of our country than any treatise that has hitherto been used. * * * I feel greatly disposed to favor its use."—JOSEPH McKEEN, Superintendent Common Schools, City and County of New-York.

"This is the only really practical system of elementary Book-keeping that has fallen under my observation. It is brief, lucid and comprehensive, and contains, under a variety of forms, all the general principles required to be known in recording ordinary mercantile transactions. Its extensive introduction into schools will, in my opinion, confer a great blessing on popular education."—E. L. AVERY, Principal Ward School No. 27, New-York. (Concurred in by twenty other Principals.)

"I fully concur in the testimony of Mr. E. L. Avery; and, in addition, I would state that I introduced the work into my Evening School about the middle of the late term. My pupils were delighted with it, and made more rapid progress in it than in any book I ever used. They liked the book because they understood it. Indeed, so little assistance did even the least advanced of my pupils require, that I deem the work truly entitled to be called 'Book-keeping without a Master.'"—WM. P. MOSS, Jr., Principal Ward School No. 37, New-York. (Concurred in by other Principals.)

"'Mayhew's Practical Book-keeping' is a capital work. It is well fitted for use in our common Schools in New-York, and I cordially recommend its introduction both here and elsewhere."—THOMAS K. FOULKE, Principal Ward School No. 14, New-York.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.
From the New-York Tribune.

This is a plain, brief treatise, by the late able Superintendent of Public Instruction in Michigan, whose labors in another department of education have given him an eminent position among the friends of popular improvement in this country. It is not a mere compilation, but presents several original features of great value. By its perfect clearness of expression, its admirable arrangement, and the multiplicity of example by which its theoretic principles are illustrated, it is well adapted to common use. No work on the subject, that we have seen, can be more safely recommended to farmers and mechanics, as exactly suited to their wants. Price 62 cents.

THE NEW BOOK BY THE AUTHOR OF "ALONE."
THE HIDDEN PATH,
BY MARION HARLAND.
One elegant 12mo. Price $1 25.
From the New-York Evening Post.

"The following notice of this work, which we find in the Richmond Enquirer, is doubtless from the generous pen of MRS. ANNA CORA RITCHIE, and contains a just tribute to the literary talents of the most successful female writer Virginia has yet produced."

"Let this noble production (we use the adjective in its fullest sense) lie upon the table, enliven the hearth, be the household companion of every true-hearted Virginian. Foster this gifted daughter of the South with the expanding sunshine of appreciation, the refreshing dews of encouragement, [illegible] stimulate undeveloped genius, which has never yet 'penned its inspiration,' to walk in her steps, emulate her achievements and share her honors—let Virginia produce a few more such writers, and the cry that the South has no literature of its own is silenced forever! The Hidden Path is a work that north or south, east or west, may point to with the finger of honest pride and say, 'Our daughter' sends this message to the world—pours this balm into wounded hearts—traces for wavering, erring footsteps 'Hidden Path' which leads to the great goal of eternal peace."

BUILDING MATERIALS.

ROOFING SLATE.

PRICES GREATLY REDUCED!—WHY NOT USE IT?—IT IS CHEAPER, HANDSOMER, MORE DURABLE, MORE FIRE-PROOF THAN METAL, and can be as readily supplied and laid on.

THE EAGLE SLATE COMPANY,
of Castleton, Vermont,

INVITE THE ATTENTION OF BUILDERS, ARCHITECTS, and the public generally, to their GREEN AND PURPLE ROOFING SLATE, which, being superior to any hitherto quarried in DURABILITY OF COLOR, IS FULLY EQUAL TO THE WELSH. It can also be transported cheaply to any of the STATES, CANADA, OR THE WEST INDIES.

The Company, while calling the attention of the public to the article produced by them, would remark of SLATE FOR ROOFING PURPOSES in general, that the cheapness with which it is produced and laid on, its great protection against fires and the heat of the Summer, with the fact that it never requires painting—lasting a life-time without repairs—renders it SUPERIOR TO ANY OTHER ROOFING MATERIAL. They therefore invite all Committees for the erection of public institutions, and persons building first-class residences in town or country, to investigate the subject.

They refer to the following experienced slaters for information as to the quality of the article manufactured by them, viz:

JOHN BRODIE, No. 627 Washington-st., New-York.
EDWARD CROMMELIN, No. 628 Washington-st., New-York.
P. & J. DUGAN, No 436 Broome-st., New-York.

COUNTY BONDS FOR SALE.—Proposals will be received, addressed to the subscribers, at the office of C. R. MILLER & CO., Auctioneers, No. 182 Broadway, New-York, until the 28th day of September, for the purchase of the whole or part of $300,000 of the six per cent. Coupon Bonds of Davidson County, State of Tennessee. Proposals may be for cash, or for 20 per cent. cash, and balance in [illegible] of five or ten per cent.

These Bonds are issued to the Nashville and Northwestern Railroad Company in conformity to a special act of the Legislature, which act provides for the assessment and collection of a special tax for payment of interest, and to create a sinking fund for their final payment. The tax for the current year is now being collected.

These Bonds offer superior inducements to capitalists. The County, embracing the City of Nashville, is the wealthiest in the State—the taxable property amounting to twenty-one millions dollars, and the system of Railroads now being constructed will, when completed, increase that amount largely.

Any further information may be obtained by applying at the office of C. R. MILLER & CO., No. 182 Broadway; or, by addressing the subscribers, at Nashville, Tenn.

Planning a New Party.

Hon. THOMAS G. PRATT, of Maryland, favors us with the prospectus of a new "National Party." His "plan," as they call such things in Mexico, is pretty much that of Mr. WASHINGTON HUNT, with a little more tropical ripeness, perhaps; involving concession on all hands, a general amnesty, an unscientific contempt for the points of the compass; and with such equipage and munitions Mr. PRATT is of opinion he can furnish forth a union party as invulnerable, in all details of doctrine, as air. It will no doubt prove about as substantial. He counts already on three adherents—namely, Messrs. HUNT, WISE, and PRATT, gentlemen of monosyllabic name, but sufficiently syllabic on paper; and who may be regarded as holders of tickets in this Grand Consolidated Maryland scheme. It is to be lamented that the programme before us omits any hint as to the nature and extent of the concessions expected from the North, and is equally reserved as to the propositions of the South. Without such preliminaries it must be difficult to treat. One party negotiating has so little left to concede that it cannot avoid anxiety as to the conditions of the bargain; should they be exorbitant, its political indigence is too absolute to render a deal practicable. What does Mr. PRATT offer?—what does he ask? Will Kansas be restored? Will the status in quo of Nebraska be guaranteed? Will the Fugitive Slave Bill be repealed? Shall we have legislation, reaching such cases as WILLIAMSON'S, reducing the term of imprisonment, due to diffidence about uttering perjury to gratify a federal judge, from life to a term of ten or twenty years, or so? Shall we be let off without the positive introduction of Slavery into the Free States? Will the Senate, of which Mr. PRATT is a distinguished ornament, embody in the form of a confirmative act, a few phrases of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution, touching human rights and the sanctity of personal liberty? Not the least of these concessions can be anticipated for a moment; and nobody knows it better than Mr. PRATT. How can he construct his compromise, where one contracting party will yield nothing, and the other has nothing to yield? The compact is clearly hopeless.

The truth is, the Maryland Senator is infected with a modern epidemic for creating parties. Everybody has it, and it carries off now a HUNT, and now a HENDERSON. But Mr. PRATT forgets how largely he has already indulged in the handicraft; that he has already made two great parties, quite sufficient for ordinary purposes, and bidding fair, as they do, to last for some years to come, he may tranquilly repose upon an evidence of skill so triumphant in that particular branch of manufacture. No man took a more rabid part than he in the erasion of the Missouri line. He spoke, and urged, and bullied, in a fashion gratifying, doubtless, to the presiding officer of the Senate, whose natural gifts were rather chilled and cowed at the time by the exposed elevation of the seat he occupied; but extremely surprising to those accustomed to the daily urbanity of the Senator's life. By the passage of that bill a two-edged issue was raised, and the parties to sustain the respective sides fell into their places, where they may now be found, resolved unanimously—for the few mercenary squads, lingering on the Federal bench, or about the Custom-Houses and the Post-Offices of the land may be disregarded—to dispose of that issue by a persevering and final conflict. These are not closet parties, contrived in the library, and existing potentially on paper only, and in pigeon holes; documentary parties, cooked, like friends to dinner, by a circular letter, and drilled by written precept of Senators, Governors, and ex-Governors; they are the living offspring of a momentous contingency, serving in a practical cause, that appeals to every sense of right, to every sentiment and passion, and has practical questions to determine. They are such parties as take life from revolutionary measures, and are animated and kept alive by the existence of wrongs that authorize, when milder means have been exhausted in vain, a resort to similar measures to right them. And such parties Mr. PRATT has helped to create; beside them this later invention is as a manikin to a man, lifeless and powerless. Why not then postpone these holiday experiments on the public: why not wait until the indignant spirit of agitation, deliberately excited by the Senator and his friends last year, shall have finished its work! When it shall have done so, the Union will probably be found stout and healthy enough to dispense with the dry nurture and ill-timed coddling of political grandams.

Political Squibs.

Perfect freedom of the Press, as it exists in this country, is not more favorable to witty pasquinades and political squibs than the strict censorship and personality of the writers which are the rule in France. There is no necessity for cloaking an attack upon a political opponent here in the guise of fiction, or of seeking to mitigate the ferocity of personal malice by investing it with humor, or dazzling the eyes of the public by corruscations of wit. Where downright abuse and personal vindictiveness may be indulged in with impunity by anonymous writers, there is no necessity for any roundabout and indirect means of accomplishing the same purpose. But, in England there is just enough freedom of the Press, and just enough power vested in the governing classes to make satire necessary in attacking a political opponent. There are privileged classes in England, but there are none here, and though great freedom is permitted to public writers, yet there is always a sense of danger in a too free expression of opinion in regard to members of the Government, which leads to an active exercise of the inventive faculties of writers for the Press, in devising forms of attack which will screen the satirist from prosecution. From the days of DRYDEN and SWIFT down to the present time England has abounded in political satirists, who have wielded the pen and the pencil with equal effect. No other country can boast of half the wealth in satirical humor which is one of the glories of British intellect. It is for the reasons we have hinted at that Punch is so popular and always so good, and it is not owing to any lack of ability on our part, we flatter ourselves, that no such publication has ever been successful here. There is no necessity for it. We have an abundance of witty and humorous writers, and no people have evinced a more hearty appreciation of humor; but we have no need for such elements in our political warfare, because every man who chooses to call his opponent a fool or a rogue, does so in the simplest and most forcible language he is master of. We love a good deal of fun in consequence of the perfect freedom we enjoy, but then the fun of freedom is better than the freedom of fun; and, on the whole, we may boast that ours is a country in which neither a Charivari nor a Punch can exist. We don't indulge in pasquinades because we are privileged to indulge in philippics, and we are much more likely to produce a DEMOSTHENES than an ARISTOPHANES.

We hardly open an English paper which does not contain a piece of satire against the party in power, or against the opposition minority. CANNING made his way to the Premiership by virtue of his political squibs—but a reputation for wit and satire in this country would be fatal to the prospects of a political adventurer. The last number of the Press, received by the Baltic, the new Tory paper which DISRAELI assisted to establish, contains a good many satirical and humorous attacks on the Ministry, as a specimen of which we extract the following, which contains some bitter sarcasms which could not be spoken out more plainly without endangering the personal liberty of the utterer:

THE MINISTERIAL HUE AND CRY.

Run away from the neighborhood of Downing-street and Whitehall, the following public servants. They are not advertised for on account of their usefulness, being an uncommonly bad lot, but only that they may be brought back to be regularly dismissed and their successors appointed:

1. Old Pam, alias Cupid, alias The Jaunty Jester. A man not much upwards of seventy; but, as he dyes his hair and whiskers, he looks a good deal older. Very quarrelsome with little boys, but always gives in to men of his own size. Goes to sleep a good deal, and when he is awake makes bad jokes, chiefly about people's misfortunes. Is supposed to be with Richardson's booth, having always had a great fancy to perform the part of Clown to a more congenial audience than that at St. Stephen's; has a bad habit of laughing at the Church and parsons, and such things.

The Old Marquis, or Cock of Bowood, is supposed to be playing Pantaloon to Pammy's Clown—if the young ladies of the ballet have not objected to having him behind the scenes.

GRANVILLE, or the "Old Buck-hunter," is supposed also to be cultivating histrionics, as his natural, graceful and highly aristocratic appearance has been lately further set off by the addition of a stubby beard—doubtless not grown for nothing.

The Worthy Mole is only advertised after for form sake. He has got into a place where he can do a good deal of mischief, and if he has run away for good so much the better. It will be the only thing he has done for good in his life.

Ben Hall is thought to have gone to Germany, after the Bishop of London, to try to induce his lordship to allow St. Paul's to be fitted up as a Casino for the million on Sundays and Fast-days, Cancan to be danced on Ash Wednesdays and Good Fridays.

The Free Kirk Toper was last seen in the Old Shades, London-bridge, renowned for their fiery port. The F. K. T., from professional associations, patronizes the "strong military ditto." N. B.—It is hardly worth while to disturb him; he is not a bit more stupid and incapable when he is drunk than when he is sober.

The Carlisle Pet is stated to be employed by an eminent agriculturist in Ireland, to intimidate birds of carrion from devastating the present harvest.

Low Bob is credibly reported to have been seen in a caravan, admission 2d., children and servants half price.

Lively Lewis has absconded to Herefordshire. He will be known by his sprightly air and appearance. He wears a flower in his button hole, his hat very much on one side, and hums light and amorous ditties in a very doleful key, Old Pam having kindly told him that it was enough for him to be dull without looking so.

Wooden Charlie is annotating a new edition of "Joe Miller," with the assistance of Sergeant Murphy, who is likewise instructing him in the art of graceful repartee. And Simpering Smith is engaged in laying in and trying on a new stock of waistcoats, lemon-colored gloves, and patent leather bottines. This graceful young statesman is also endeavoring to understand MILLS' "India," and has written to King BOMBA to assist his crem in defence of Torture.

Freedoms like these may be taken in England with the Queen's Minister, yet when we, in this free country, which we have been boasting of, took the liberty of insinuating that Alderman BRIGGS was a nuisance, that gentleman had the impudence to sue us for libel! But, anybody may commence a suit in a free country, though it is necessary to have some show of justice on your side to sustain one.

Indicting the Common Council.

The action of our Grand Jury in indicting certain members of the Common Council is an event full of hope and promise; for, whether the unlucky gentlemen who are made the scapegoats for the sins of their compeers be guilty or not of the high crimes and misdemeanors of which they are accused, is not of much importance to the public, though it may be of a good deal to themselves; it is enough to strike a wholesome terror into the whole body of our City legislators and corporation cormorants, to know that there is a possibility of their being caught in the act, and made to suffer for their outrageous villanies. We have no disposition to prejudge the culprits in this case, and we trust that they may have a fair and searching trial; if they can prove their innocence, it will be all the better for them to have had an opportunity of clearing their characters of the suspicions that have attached to them. If they should be found guilty, though the crimes of which they are accused are venial, compared with those of which they and their associates have been generally suspected, they will deserve no sympathy; nor receive any. We hope if these gentlemen be found guilty and made to suffer that they will not be above "'peaching" on their comrades. If the Aldermen and Councilmen are not guilty of much worse offences than these indicted gentlemen are accused of, there never was so grossly libelled a body as our Common Council. The tower of Siloam which has fallen upon the maladroit Aldermen is his Honor the Mayor, who has exhibited, in this instance, a very commendable zeal in bringing the offenders to justice, or at least of putting them in the road to get it.

Steamboat Landings.

*One of the most remarkable defects of New-*York, which must first attract the notice of a stranger, particularly if he comes from the Old World, are the wretchedly inconvenient wharves at which steamboats land their passengers. The greater number of strangers who visit us come by water carriage in some shape or other, and must, of course, land at our wharves; yet there is not a suitable steamboat landing place, except those belonging to the Ferry Companies, on either side of the City. They are not only narrow and insecure in themselves, but the approaches to them are the very filthiest parts of the City. You cannot get to the landings of either of the Sound boats, or the Southern steamships on the North side of the City, without passing through streets that reek with filth, and poison the atmosphere by the noisome exhilations of the gutters. But, bad as the landings are, from want of space and the unsafe manner of their construction, they are rendered infinitely worse by the want of proper police regulations to preserve the passengers from being set upon by a horde of wild carriage drivers, who will not let them depart in peace until two or three hundred whips and greasy cards have been thrust in their faces. There is nothing that the City needs so much as convenient landing places for steamboats; and as the passenger business is one of our great interests, and a source of immense profit, it should be properly cared for, and strangers, on landing here, should not be treated in a manner to make them dread to renew their acquaintance with us. But, if we cannot have better wharves for passengers to land upon, they should at least be protected from the annoyance of rival hackmen struggling for the possession of them. Our steamboat landings contrast most unfavorably with the landing places in Philadelphia, or any other of the Atlantic cities. Yet it must be always remembered that the press of business along our wharves is so great that there are but small opportunities for making alterations or repairs. But, as some change must be made before long to accommodate the enormous increase in the passenger business of the port, it is quite time that the work were begun, and some plans adopted for making adequate provision for future exigencies. The work of reforming our wharves, or of building suitable steamboat landings in some new localities further up-town, is of too great magnitude to be accomplished in a hurry, and it should be commenced now, that it may be accomplished in time to meet the absolute requirements of our rapidly increasing commerce. The steamboat landings are at the same places now that they were when all the hotels were below Chambers-street, and the greater part of the population below Bleecker. But now the conditions of the City are changed, in respect to population, the great hotels are nearly all above Canal-street, and it would add greatly to the convenience of the traveling public if the steamboat landings were all above that point.

Something Wrong in Society.

Some of our morning cotemporaries are cackling very loudly over a discovery they have just made, that there is something wrong in society; and one of them has proposed to rectify the wrong by getting up an association. But there has been something wrong in society ever since Adam and Eve were expelled from Paradise—and it has been so long in existence that we apprehend it will require something more than an association to cure it. The wrong thing in society is the inherent evil of human nature, the proclivity to vice, the feebleness of the flesh to withstand temptation, and the inability of the intellect to comprehend the danger of violating God's laws. People who base their belief of there being something wrong in society upon a recent aberration of one of their unfortunate neighbors, must have traveled through this tearful valley with an enviable unconsciousness of the inevitable condition of human existence, and the great and little facts of history. There is something terribly wrong in society, and one of the most practical and surest ways of reforming it is for every member of society to see to it that he is all right himself. We mean nothing personal to anybody; but it sometimes happens that people who make a great outcry about the wrongs of society are like the fat man in the Tale of a Tub, who kept exclaiming against the crowd, and was told that if he would only remove his own bulky carcass there would be room enough for everybody else.

Ugliness at a Premium.

Mr. EDWIN CHADWICK recently made an official report to the British Parliament, respecting the progress of the Female Government School of Art, which contains a notable paragraph, as follows:

> "The females (educated as teachers of drawing in the public schools of art,) have been so far advanced in mental power and influence as to have been lost to the service by matrimonial engagements, obtained with exceeding rapidity. To avoid these losses plainer candidates were selected for training; but they, too, have obtained preference as wives to a perplexing extent."

This statement, though it may appear like a joke, is made in sober earnest, and has been printed as such in one of the Blue Books of the British Legislature. There is something very absurd in the idea of a preference being given, in a crowd of candidates, to the young women who are rather ill-looking. That a selection should be made in favor of ugliness, seems to violate the ordinary principles of justice and propriety. This giving a premium to homeliness is abundantly objectionable. Plain teachers, like "plain cooks," obtain a preference, it seems. Fine eyes, a good complexion, ruddy lips, nice hair, a handsome nose, a beautiful profile, are disqualifications, it is confessed, (there being an equality on mental points,) when placed in competition with their opposites. A decided squint would then be an advantage—a sallow cheek—thin, pale lips—sand-colored hair, and the tout ensemble of an ugly woman "obtain the preference." An aquiline or Grecian nose, in such a case, would be conquered by a snub or a nez retroussé, and a fine figure would be dead beaten by a hunchback!

The misfortune is, that even homeliness, thus promoted, exhibits a decided antipathy to celibacy. Well-informed, clever, smart young women, although not possessed of personal charms, "have obtained preference, as wives, to a perplexing extent." No great wonder: the very fact of their talents having obtained for them the advantage of high educational culture, naturally attracts the favorable notice of men of sense, who consider that mere personal beauty is only skin-deep. The whole affair reminds us of the Military Academy at West Point, where young men receive an excellent education, to prepare them for the army; but about five out of every six devote themselves, after they have graduated, to law, physic, divinity, literature, art, engineering, mercantile pursuits or the navy,—naturally preferring avocations which are more advantageous than the badly-paid and tardily-advanced profession of arms.

We need scarcely say that Mr. CHADWICK is a regular John Bull. None other could possibly have been so ungallant as to imagine that any wearer of the petticoats could be "plain," if young, (for youth is a beauty;) or, at any rate, to give a premium to ugliness.

A Lazy Hour Along Broadway—What one Sees, and Hears, and Thinks About it.

It is 3 o'clock when we have finished fifty things requiring immediate attention, and fifty more, equally demanding a place in the morning's issue of the TIMES, remain untouched. The afternoon is one of a brief "heated term;" not sufficiently heated to be termed hot, but warm and sultry—a muggy afternoon. An afternoon on which all work is labor, and all labor is irksome. An afternoon to be spent in doing nothing, if ever there was an afternoon that richly deserved to be spent in such a way. Just the afternoon for a lazy, listless saunter along Broadway. We'll try it. Perhaps some accident will occur, of a magnitude suitable for an item.

What a pleasure this walking across the City Hall Park is, for when a person is walking, he is not supposed to be obliged to do anything else; and it is a muggy afternoon. There are some twenty people around the fountain—it is too sultry to be exact as to numbers. The Croton is not on, but they look up from its source as if the fountain were in full play and they were amusing themselves by watching its ever varying height. Here is one—there is another sitting on the chain, and leaning against the tree; there is another, all of whose countenances are not those of persons who have come out from their daily avocations, for a few moments' change of air and scene. Their apparel is scant, but that would not excite particular attention on a sultry day, were it not too well worn for us to believe it in accordance with either the taste or inclination of the wearers. The one on the chain lifts his sadness-speaking eyes, as, by way of introducing conversation, we inquire the way to Bond-street.

He has heard of a street by that name, but does not know in what part of the City it is. He has been here but three weeks—what a three weeks to him! He arrived here in search of employment. Had worked for a farmer in Pennsylvania. Had heard that he could do better in New-York. Had come here to try his luck, and found it very bad indeed. Had tried the intelligence offices, only to meet delay and disappointment. Had expended nearly all his money, and consequently had been obliged to quit the restaurants and saloons, and betake himself to the Park, where alone he could rest his feet undisturbed. Had no idea of what he should do when his money was gone. There are thousands more in like circumstances.

That's a fine store of STEWART'S, and so are nearly all the others in Broadway. The dry goods stores are well filled with customers, who do not seem to be in any immediate need of new dresses; but there are several who are looking longingly in through the windows, who are not so finely clad. Why do they not go in? The same is true at the milliner's. Those whose Summer styles, of the most costly material, have but lately received trimmings of Autumn tints, are busy with other fashions; while those who are still wearing the cheapest material and plainest style of the past Winter are wistfully admiring the velvet ribbons in the window show-case. Perhaps on Fortune's ever-changing wheel, those inside may be carried out, and the wistful gazers through the show-case at the window give large orders on its contents to the bedizzened skinny maid who now frowns them from her store. The beggar woman on the steps near by has the same sad story for them all.

And so it is with the jewelry stores, and, in fact, with all our most elegant and luxuriant establishments on Broadway. In the merchant tailors', the most expensively and gaudily dressed youths are choosing from the most costly cloths, and giving the most minute directions concerning the cut—while "ragged Pat" stands outside, wondering when he will have money enough to buy new clothes and be a gentleman.

The hotels are doing well; there are many strangers in the front parlors and lounging at the doors. The declining swell is there, as usual, in his accustomed place, and still chewing the end of his last cigar. There is one hotel, the loungers at which, as we pass along, seem all to have given most serious and fatiguing attention to cleanliness. Their hair is short, but combed to a painful degree of precision, and turned up with excruciating exactness over their ears, which are of fiery redness. Their hats, which are triumphs of perseverance, sit jauntily, if not defiantly, over their left eyebrows; and their skin shines like the belly of a long-drowned pup. They have redness of eyes, which, despite the regeneratives taken during the day, tell plainly of a previous night's gambling and debauch.

There are flaming bills on the poster boards of the Theatres, but, with the exception of a meanly-clad ballet girl, no one is entering or coming away. There will be a throng, and the ballet girl will have cast her mean apparel, in the evening.

Here again is a church, in gloomy architectural style. Its doors are barred and its gates are locked. Therein is, or should, be considered, a subject immeasurably above all others in importance to us all every day we live, and consequently it is open only once a week during cool weather—not at all during the warm season, if the parson is fond of a good swim at Newport or Rockaway.

The toy shop opposite is better patronized. Its occupant keeps open every day and in the evening. There, a very short old man, with long grey hairs, a red laughing face, a pump-handle nose, large enough to be blown by a whole township, and a ponderous stomach, may be had for a shilling. It is cheap, and the dear little rogue—mamma's pet—must have it and a dog that barks whenever he is squeezed, besides.

Then there is the Düsseldorf Gallery, containing many a piece of excellence. Strange that so few should be passing in or out. Our ticket shown to the courteous lady at the door, and we find some thirty persons who have learned how to spend a leisure hour in pleasure and with profit. We might remain, but it is a sultry afternoon, and Union-square is further up. Coming out, several private residences, in a public place, are observable from an air of exclusiveness that surrounds them. You are inclined to ask the first passer-by, who lives there? And if you do, and receive a satisfactory answer, you have, probably, done that which most flatters the occupant and gratifies his vanity.

But here is Union-square, and the water from the hydrants, as well as the shade the trees afford, is cool and refreshing. It's not so warm as it was—not so muggy. The children romp about, and were it not that their little gleeful faces bear a whiteness known only to the City, you might easily suppose yourself and them in the country. But they do not remain long. The servant was told when she took them out, on her peril, not to be gone more than twenty minutes, for the children would catch their death of cold if they remained longer in the open air. They would have been crying in the nursery some time ago, if Jemmy Dooley had not stopped his cart just to speak to Bridget a minute, as he was passing the gate. There are other persons here who are sufficiently peculiar to attract attention—there is one over where the herculean FORREST horsewhipped puny WILLIS; but our hour is nearly spent, and we must return. An omnibus driver erects his finger and, as if psychologized by him, up goes ours, and we are returning. As the omnibus passes the City Hospital at a rapid rate, some one shrieks, the omnibus keeps on, and it is only from a rear window that we briefly learn the cause. We have run down an elderly lady who was crossing the street, and just as other omnibuses obstruct our view some persons are carrying her in at the Hospital gate. We hasten to the office and inform our horrible-accident man of the catastrophe, a full account of which will, of course, appear in to-morrow's TIMES.

Rachel.

METROPOLITAN THEATRE.—The policy of reduced rates of admission was observable last night in the excellent attendance which greeted Mlle. RACHEL in her second representation of Thisbe, "Angelo." The Parquette and Balcony were completely filled. The First Tier contained only the overflowings, and was but scantily filled. The Second Tier, (50 cents,) was crowded.

The performance was in every respect superior to the first night, and much more enthusiastically received.

To-night Mlle. RACHEL reads at the Tabernacle.

Mlle. Vestvali.

This admired vocalist gives an inaugural concert at the new Polytechnic Hall, Brooklyn, to-night. It is an occasion of much interest to the denizens of our sister city, and is moreover the last opportunity of hearing this artist prior to her Western trip.

New Music.

*We have received the following new publica*tions from the prolific press of Messrs. WM. HALL & SON, No. 239 Broadway:

Music Rockets—Brillante capriccio.

La Sylphide—Fantasie romantique.

The Nightingale—A woodland sketch.

The Dashing Polka.

The above are from the elegant pen of MAURICE STRAKOSCH; and have recently acquired fresh popularity by his admirable performance at NIBLO'S Saloon. We recommend them as among the best of this favorite pianist's compositions.

The Fisher's Hornpipe—With brilliant variations. This is No. 6 of GROBE'S Ne Plus Ultra selection, entitled "Fountain of Pleasure."

My Home is There—Song and chorus by WM. O. FISKE. A pretty and well arranged song, in a popular and somewhat hacknsyed vein. The chorus at the end is very suggestive of burnt cork.

Lilly Willy Waken—New song and chorus by CH. E. WORK; dedicated to HENRY WOOD, and, we suppose, sung by WOOD'S Minstrels. There is humor enough in the words to make this a popular song of its class, but it is to be regretted that public taste still requires so much of what cannot be called music.

Calm be Thy Sleep—Song by CH. C. CONVERSE, sung by Miss GEORGIANA STUART. We have seen a number of pieces by Mr. CONVERSE, of late publication, and find much in them to commend. With a little more care and attention, he will become not only a favorite composer, but one of more than ordinary merit. This is a good song.

The May Morning and Love's Approach—Two duets for soprano and contralto, by WM. VINCENT WALLACE. We do not remember to have seen anything of this class that has pleased us as well as these two duets. They are not only conceived in most excellent taste, but are pleasing and melodious. They have been sung several times during the last two weeks, at NIBLO'S Saloon, by Mlle. PARODI and Mme. STRAKOSCH.

Mr. Sanders and the Guillotine.

MR. EDITOR: If the Revolution of 1848 has done something that does honor to it, it was the abolition of capital punishment for political offences, and VICTOR HUGO, LOUIS BLANC, and all the true Democrats in Europe want to carry further the principles,—extending it to all crimes. I therefore think it is my duty to protest through the organ of your valuable paper, against Mr. SANDERS' sympathies for the political guillotine, as being not at all the way in which his European friends hope to come to the triumph of their principles.

I am, Sir, &c., IRAN GOLORIN.

BROOKLYN, Sunday, Sept. 23, 1855.

JAMES MCFETRIDGE, Collector of the Customs for the District of Minnesota, (Pembina,) Minnesota Territory, vice PHILIP BEAUPRIE, resigned.

Swamp and Overflowed Lands in Missouri.

From the St. Louis Republican.

Governor PRICE returned to this city on Wednesday, from Washington City. It will be gratifying to the people of this State to learn that he succeeded to his entire satisfaction in accomplishing the object of his mission. This object was, to secure to the several counties in which they lie, all swamp and overflowed lands granted to this State by acts of Congress. These lands have been donated to the counties in which they lie. It is known that in many cases entries of such lands have been permitted at different Land Offices in the State, and the counties were likely to lose in this way the best portions of them, if the entries were allowed to go on. On the representations of the Governor, the President authorized the proper Department to issue immediately patent certificates for all lands which had been selected as swamp and overflowed lands, except in cases where a contest has arisen; and in this latter case, if determined in favor of the State, a patent will issue as soon as the decision is made. We understand that the entries are very inconsiderable in amount, in the St. Louis, Springfield, Milan, and one or two other Land Districts, but in the Plattsburg, and perhaps other Districts, the entries amount to several thousand acres. The prompt action of the Governor, by his presence at Washington, will save to the counties large quantities of land which are valuable on account of the timber, if nothing more.

MAINE.—The Augusta Age sums up its returns of the vote for Governor thus: 1854—PARRIS, 28,630; MORRILL, 44,784; REED, 14,012; CARY, &c., 3,567. 1855—WELLS, 48,160; MORRILL, 51,180; REED, 10,625; scattering, 67.

The Senate will stand—Democrats, 15; Whigs, 9; Republicans, 2, (in Hancock County;) and five vacancies, viz: in Penobscot, Piscataquis and Aroostook Counties. The vacancies will probably be filled with Democrats. The House of Representatives stands thus far—60 Democrats, 61 Republicans, and 21 Whigs.

The constitutional amendments presented to the people have all been accepted in a meagre vote of about one-fifth of the voters. That on the election of Judges by the people was accepted—yeas, 14,520; nays, 10,487.

BOSTON PUBLIC LIBRARY.—We are gratified to be able to announce that His Honor the Mayor, by the last steamer, received another letter from Mr. BATES, dated the 6th of September, proposing to make a munificent addition of books to the Public Library.—Daily Advertiser.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

HYATT'S PATENT LIGHTS.

ONE OF THE OLD TIME PEOPLE!—AN HONEST MAN! Something over a year ago I called on Mr. T., who had a building in process of erection. The moment he understood the object of my visit, he replied as follows: "Mr. HYATT, I shall get my lights of no one but you. I have made it a rule through life to encourage the man who does the public a service by the introduction of a useful invention. I have not, nor will I ever give countenance to that class of persons who never risk anything themselves to benefit the public—but wait until some ingenious and perhaps poor man has, with patience and toil, proved the invention valuable; and then, just at the winning hour, rush in to crowd him out and themselves enjoy the fruits of his labor!"

Mr. T. gave his order for my best LEAD BANDED LIGHTS. And what is more, he paid the cash for them like a Christian and a gentleman, without grumbling!

A STORY OF THE HEART.

BY THE AUTHOR OF THE OUTCAST WIFE, &c., &c.

CHAPTER I.

Rather more than half way between the ancient city of Canterbury and Barham Downs, is the pretty village of Brook, dropped, as it were, at the foot of a gently sloping hill, from whose summit the towers of the venerable cathedral which gives his title to the primate of England, and the picturesque remains of the Abbey of St. Augustine are distinctly visible.

Previous to the introduction of railroads, Brook was a bustling, lively place; the mail, numerous stage-coaches, and heavy wagons laden with merchandise passed daily through it, on their way between the metropolis and Dover, to the no small profit of the innkeepers, who drove a thriving trade.

Alas! for the mutability of human affairs! Few things are stable in this world. And so it proved with the prosperity of Brook—for as steam communication advanced, stage-coaches, wagons, and mails gradually disappeared from the road. Three out of the five inns, in process of time, were closed, and the stable-boys and hangers-on—always a numerous tribe—driven to seek employment on the neighboring farms, or as porters at the various stations of the railroad.

Among the few persons whom prudence and economy in early life enabled to meet the change, was Matthew Price, the landlord of the Warden's Arms, who declared that as long as he lived the house should never close—a resolution which Mr. Shanks, the old waiter, and Peter Brin, the ostler, highly approved.

To him a railroad—for he had never seen one—was a myth—a sort of carnivorous monster whose ravenous appetite could only be appeased by the sacrifice of unfortunate inn-keepers, ostlers, waiters, and post-boys, whom, figuratively speaking, it crunched in its iron jaws.

Shanks, the waiter, who had lived thirty years in his service, treated him with great respect; while Brin, the ostler, used to declare that the guv'nor's bark was much worse than his bite. As the two last-mentioned personages and one female servant constituted the entire establishment at the Warden's Arms, it may be as well to introduce them at once to our readers.

The first, Reuben Shanks, was a tall, thin, melancholy looking man, of a semi-clerical appearance, to which his white cravat, tied in the enormous bow which Beau Brummel brought into fashion at the commencement of the present century, and well-brushed suit of black not a little contributed. The only serious fault his master ever found was, that he did not grow fat. Good living, he used to assert, was thrown away upon him.

Brin, the ostler, on the contrary, followed his master's tastes. He had the same affection for good living and ale, enjoyed a joke, and was considered quite an oracle in the village on all points connected with horse-flesh and racing.

Matthew Price was seated in his comfortable bar on a sharp, frosty morning in the month of November, eighteen hundred and ——, but no matter for the exact date. He had just done justice to an ample breakfast, the remains of which were still on the table beside him. The old man was gazing dreamily on the fire, which burned cheerfully in the huge grate before him.

Once or twice he moved his legs as the heat incommoded them; then sank again into his apathetic, musing mood.

The half hatch of the bar was gently opened, and Shanks made his appearance, with a letter in his hand. It was from a lawyer named Mant, written to inform him that a party of five gentlemen would arrive that very day at the Warden's Arms, and directing him to have dinner and rooms prepared.

Shanks absolutely started at the alacrity with which the host bounded from his seat; it was not so much the hope of profit which excited him as the pleasure of occupation.

"Light a fire in the long room—tell Sally to see the bed-rooms are well aired!" he exclaimed. "Send Brin to me—he must ride to Canterbury! Let me see," he added, speaking as if he were consulting with himself; "we must have fish—no time for soup—a saddle of mutton, fowls, and a tart—that will do very well, considering the shortness of the notice!"

The waiter stared as if he thought his master was going mad. He was soon made, however, to comprehend the important event about to take place, and a faint smile flitted for an instant over his melancholy, respectable face.

The worthy landlord was once more in his element. During the day he bustled from the kitchen to the garret, from the parlor to the bed-rooms, to see that everything was in proper order to receive his expected guests.

It was not till he had seen the table arranged to his satisfaction, and the preparations properly advanced in the kitchen, that Matthew Price returned to his sanctum to indulge in his pipe and glass of ale. Once or twice Reuben Shanks thrust his head over the hatch, to ask certain directions.

"The gentlemen will take wine with their dinner, I suppose, Sir?"

"Of course," replied his master; "Lawyer Mant would never send any twopenny travelers to my house."

"Am I to say that you have any of the fifteen port left, if they ask for it?"

"Hear what they say to the pale sherry first. If they praise that ——. Well, perhaps—we shall see."

Just as the soles were turning deliciously brown and the saddle done to a turn, a phaeton and pair drove up to the porch of the old fashioned inn, and the expected guests alighted; four inside—as the waiter called them—and one outside—the latter, being the youngest of the party, rode with the driver on the box—five travelers in all.

Their luggage consisted of an equal number of traveling bags, several portfolios, an instrument which, as Matthew Price described it that same evening to the schoolmaster of the village, resembled a very long three-legged stool, with a brass box and spy-glass at the top, instead of a seat.

The dinner passed off to the satisfaction of all parties; the pale sherry was highly commended, and the fifteen port—the pride of the Warden's Arms—produced in honor of the occasion.

Matthew Price was smoking his pipe in the bar, satisfied with himself and rather more reconciled with the world, when Shanks made his appearance, with a fresh order for wine.

"I knew they'd want it," observed the old man, pointing to a couple of respectable magnums enveloped in venerable cobwebs and sawdust upon the table. "Mind how you decant it—it's downright sinful to disturb such a crust!"

The waiter sighed.

"Not every customer I'd give it to," continued the speaker, eyeing the bottles affectionately; "the fifteen are getting fearfully low—not more than six dozen and a half left! No such wine to be had now-a-days, all along of these infernal railroads, which are destroying everything in England!"

"Are the gentlemen pretty merry, Shanks?"

"They are noisy enough, Sir," was the reply.

"Ah!" ejaculated the host, "good wine maketh the tongue wag. They have a right to be merry. Men who travel in the good old fashion must have a good conscience! I'd be bound they would not risk their necks on the rail!"

The waiter gave a dry, dissatisfied cough. While waiting on the party at dinner, he had heard enough to satisfy him how far his master's opinion of his guests was correct or not.

"You are growing over-precise, Reuben," observed the old man, with a chuckle—for in the innocence of his heart he concluded that his servant's strict notions of propriety had been shocked by some rather too free expression or broad jest among the gentlemen up stairs. "I wish to heaven," he added, "you would laugh and get fat! Your very appearance is a discredit to the place! I shall be obliged to have a second waiter if business goes on increasing at the Warden's Arms."

Shanks quitted the bar with the magnums, in each hand, and an air of sly satisfaction was upon his parchment colored, melancholy features; perhaps he felt that the hour of retribution was not far distant.

After breakfast the following morning the travelers paid their bill without a murmur—for the charges, like the entertainment, were unexceptionable. The carpet bags were duly arranged in the phaeton, to the secret content of Brin, who felt anxious to see them safely out of the place.

"We shall be back to-morrow at five, landlord!" said the elder of the party, addressing himself to the host, who had been busily engaged handing the portfolios into the carriage.

Matthew bowed.

"If you could procure a dish of game to add to our dinner!"

A knowing smile lit for an instant the broad features of the master of the Warden's Arms. Shanks asserted that he even attempted to wink—but this must have been a calumny.

A sigh of mingled relief and satisfaction escaped from the hearts of both ostler and waiter as the vehicle drove off.

"Gentlemen!" muttered their master; "perfect gentlemen! I wonder where they are going to!"

"Lawyer Littleton's," said Brin, answering the question for him.

This was the name of the gentleman at the head of every railway scheme in the country. Matthew Price no sooner heard it than his eyes began suddenly to dilate, as if some painful conviction was gradually stealing over him.

"Lawyer Littleton's?" he repeated.

"Yes, master! I heard them direct the postboy where to drive to!"

"Then—no—it can't be! I have never given my number fifteen to—to——"

The conclusion was so horrible that he could not complete the sentence.

The ostler nodded, as much as to say, "Indeed, master, but you have!" whilst the waiter thrust the corner of his napkin into his mouth, to hide the grin which he was unable to repress.

Matthew Price had always entertained the idea that if the innkeepers of England had done their duty railroads would never have been established in that country. He, at least, had hitherto been faithful; surveyors, draughtsmen and agents had been sternly refused lodging and entertainment at the Warden's Arms; he had even carried his principles so far as to refuse several dinners ordered by a committee of landholders and gentry in the neighborhood whose interests were affected—and to be taken in at last! The explosion of his wrath was terrible. If words had not come to his relief apoplexy must [illegible].

"Villains!" he exclaimed, shaking his fat fist at his servants, "you to deceive me!"

"I did not know it till this morning," said Brin, resolutely; "and I thought it was best to let them go without a rumpus."

"A rumpus—I'd have——. Well, I'm finished with the Warden's Arms at last! I'm a disgraced man. I'll shut up the place, and you may go to the workhouse—or the rail."

"I thought they were no gentlemen," observed Shanks, who by this time had recovered his gravity.

"Gentlemen!" repeated the host. "Run, you canting rascal, and look after the spoons!"

The waiter, glad of an escape, disappeared instantly. His master followed him.

It was amusing to hear Matthew's commentaries and self-reproaches as he gathered up the various articles of old-fashioned plate, which, in justice to his late guests, we must state he found to be quite correct.

"That I should have been such a fool!" he muttered, "to have let the enemy into my camp! I shall never be able to endure the place again! The poor punch-bowls won't look at me as they used to do! Game! Yes—I'll provide them with game! Only let them come back—I wish they may, that's all—that's all!"

Had the speaker been possessed of the wonderful lamp of Aladdin, his desire could not have been more speedily answered—for the wheels of the phaeton were heard as the vehicle drove up once more to the entrance.

Brin, who had followed the speaker, ran to the window.

"There they are again!" he said.

"Shanks, run and close the door!" exclaimed Matthew Price; "draw the bolts and double lock it—they shan't set foot in my place again; though I do keep an inn, my house is my castle!"

He listened till the creaking of the heavy door upon its hinges assured him his orders had been complied with. Then with an air of solemn dignity he walked to the open window.

"What is the matter?" demanded the elder gentleman of the party, as soon as he saw him; "do you take us for housebreakers?"

"You shan't break into my house again!" replied the old man, doggedly. "You won't make a railroad here!"

A loud laugh from the surveyors and agents announced how exceedingly they enjoyed the joke—for they were perfectly aware of their late host's prejudices and peculiarities.

"Capital dinner!" shouted one.

"Any of the fifteen left?" added a second.

"Don't forget the game, Matthew!"

The landlord turned very red in the face, and his eyes became so unusually extended that the faithful Brin began to doubt whether they would ever return to their natural size again.

"No malice, Matthew!" said the person who had been the spokesman; "we have had an excellent dinner, and won our bet; but we have no wish to annoy you—so send down the theodolite which we forgot to take with us, and let us part friends!"

Had he asked for a rhinoceros the landlord could not have been more puzzled.

"What does the fellow want?" he said.

The ostler pointed to the instrument whose use had so puzzled his master when he assisted to remove it from the carriage.

To seize it with both hands and hurl it at them through the window was the work of a moment—that done, overcome by the exertion, Matthew Price stood glaring upon them like an angry tiger in a cage.

"Smashed!" exclaimed Brin.

To all their reproaches and threats of action for damage done to the theodolite—which really was a very valuable one—the landlord replied with a look of defiance; and as they drove off to seek what redress they might, an air of satisfaction mingled with the stern expression of his features.

"I don't think they will come to the Warden's Arms again?" he observed to the ostler.

"I wouldn't advise 'em, master!" replied Brin, clenching his fist—for he shared the old man's horror of every person and everything connected with railways. "Go down to the bar," he added, in a coaxing tone, "and let me mix 'ee a glass of old rum-and-water—it will do thee good!"

The speaker descended, as Brin had advised, to the bar, and after handing the ostler his glass, sternly locked himself in, and bid defiance to railroads and the troubles of the world.

Fortunately for himself, as well as the progress of our tale, his ideas were destined to take another direction.

Shanks tapped at the glass window over the door of the bar, and had to repeat his application for admission several times before his master paid the least attention to it.

"Well!" roared the old man.

"Lady and servant in post-chaise, Sir!"

"Tell 'em the house is shut up!"

"But the lady is ill, Sir," urged the waiter.

"Can't help it! Go——"

By this time the travelers had alighted.

"I really am incapable of proceeding any further to-day!" said a female voice; "and yet I am most anxious to reach London, where my husband expects me!"

Shanks looked at his master through the window, to see if he could detect any signs of relenting; but Matthew Price continued firm.

"What is the lady to do, sir?" he asked.

"Tell her to take the rail!" replied the old man, bitterly.

"I cannot travel by the railroad!" observed the lady; "I dislike it so much!"

There is an "open sesame" to every heart, if we only seek for it in the right place. "Not like the rail!" the stern resolution of the eccentric innkeeper vanished instantly. Of course he could accommodate the lady—to respectable travelers, his house was always open.

The new guest was a pale, beautiful girl, apparently not more than nineteen years of age, and evidently destined very soon to become a mother; which last circumstance, although palpable to every one, escaped the notice of the master of the Warden's Arms.

In the course of the following day the lady became worse, and towards evening the waiting-maid found it necessary to call in the services of Dr. Chambers, who, after seeing his patient, instantly sent off to Canterbury to procure an experienced nurse.

Matthew, who had not the slightest suspicion of the important event about to take place, wondered what could possibly be the matter with his guest. She could not have taken anything in his house to disagree with her—his conscience was perfectly easy on that score.

There was a bustle and confusion in the place—consultation between the waiting-maid, nurse, and his old servant, Sally Stret; they began to annoy as well as perplex him.

"Well, doctor," he exclaimed, as the medical gentleman made his appearance, after what the speaker considered a long visit up stairs, "is the lady better?"

"Without anticipating any immediate danger," answered Dr. Chambers, gravely, "her state is far from being as satisfactory as I could wish; but the infant is strong and hearty."

"Infant!" repeated the landlord; "I saw no infant."

The [illegible] would have been very much surprised if he had [illegible] that the helpless innocent had only drawn [illegible] within the hour.

As this was gradually explained to him, the eyes of Matthew Price dilated to twice their usual size.

"An infant!" he slowly ejaculated to himself; "a baby!"

"A boy," continued his informant; "but do not be uneasy at the circumstance—the lady is highly respectable! I will be answerable for any expense."

"Curse the expense!" ejaculated the host; "though railroads are ruining England and destroying trade, do you think I have no humanity?"

The gentleman shook him warmly by the hand.

"A boy, too!" continued the old man; "well, that is singular. I never remember such an event at the Warden's Arms before."

Seeing that the speaker was himself the last person who had been born in the house, it would have been very remarkable if he had. The circumstance rather pleased the old man than otherwise, contrary to the expectations of Sally Stret and her fellow-servants.

"Lord! Doctor," observed Matthew Price, in a philosophical tone, "what fools some of us are. I thought it was sea sickness all the time—for the waiting-maid told Sally her mistress had just come from France. Do you know—"

"Yes, and must write to her husband to-night," replied the kind-hearted man.

"I dare say he will be delighted with the news," observed Matthew Price, musingly; "how singular that it should be a boy!"

"Not very."

"I was a boy, you know," added the host, with touching simplicity, "and born in that very room!"

"Indeed!"

"In the same bed! Well, it is remarkable."

Dr. Chambers had no time to listen to any further speculation on the part of the landlord, whom he shook once more heartily by the hand, and quitted the Warden's Arms.

Matthew saw him to the door, which he closed very gently after him, so as to make as little noise as possible.

"A boy!" he muttered to himself, as, with a step as careful as that of an elephant stepping on shipboard, he mounted the staircase to retire for the night; "well, it is odd!"

CHAPTER II.

The heraldry of old gave hearts;
But our new heraldry is hands, not hearts.

In the private room of one of the most opulent banking houses in Lombard-street, was seated a hard-featured but rather gentlemanly looking man, apparently about fifty years of age. There was an air of precision in his white neck-tie and well-brushed suit of black, which indicated the character of the wearer, who was looked upon by all who knew him as one of the shrewdest men in the city.

Richard Graham, whom we are about to introduce to our readers, might be termed a safe card. Speculation—no matter how enticing the prospect, how glittering the bait—never tempted him from what he considered the legitimate path of business. By legitimate we mean sure—for on the score of morality the probability was, that he acted up to no higher standard than the rest of the moneyed world—his religion was prudence. Panics arrived and passed away—'Change had its periodical fits of convulsions; but none of them ever affected for an instant the stability of his house—upon which a run even in times of the greatest mistrust and confusion, was unheard of. Men would as soon have doubted the solvency of the Bank of England.

He was rich—fearfully rich—and the knowledge that he was so constituted one of his few enjoyments.

The love of money was not the only key to the banker's heart. He was ambitious—desirous of founding a family—of seeing his name rank with the aristocracy of the land; for this he labored in secret, and regarded his wealth as a means.

Richard Graham had married, as he did everything else, with an eye to business. As a young man, he looked upon his name to the marriage contract in the same light as his signature to a bill—an indorsement too valuable to be thrown away. Affection, if he had ever experienced such an emotion, was an extravagance not to be indulged in at the expense of money. The object of his choice was the daughter of the gentleman who had founded the house of which he was now the head.

Two sons were the issue of this marriage. The eldest, Captain Graham, was in the Guards, with an exceedingly liberal allowance from his father. The second son, who was five years his junior, had been brought up in the banking-house. The first was indulged in almost every extravagance—the other kept closely to business, under the stern eye of his parent.

Men wondered at the distinction which the banker made; but he knew very well what he was about. At their birth he had fixed in his own mind the destination of both his boys.

The old gentleman had nearly concluded his foreign correspondence, when his second son, Walter, entered the room; he was an exceedingly quiet-looking young man, very pale, and not without certain pretensions to be called good looking.

"Well!" said his father, without raising his eyes from the letter he was writing.

"Merrydew and Wells wish to overdraw their account, Sir, and I thought it advisable to take your instructions!"

"Right!" said the banker. "How much do they require?"

"Two thousand eight hundred and sixty pounds, Sir."

The thick, gray, bushy brows of Richard Graham were knit for an instant in reflection.

"Has the Tigress arrived?" he demanded.

This was the name of a vessel laden with indigo and cochineal, belonging to the firm in question, which was daily expected from India.

"Telegraphed from Southampton, Sir, this morning."

"Sure?"

"Saw it on 'Change myself, Sir."

The brows of his father unbent.

"Let them have it," he said; "for the next three months they are safe!"

The young man was about to withdraw, when the door of the room opened, and his brother, the Captain, made his appearance. He was a tall, dashing, handsome fellow, in the undress uniform of his regiment; few who gazed on his frank, open countenance would have guessed the near relationship between him and the previous speaker.

The pale countenance of Walter flushed with pleasure as he gently grasped the hand extended to him.

Richard Graham looked up, and nodding to his younger son, bade him attend to the instructions he had given him at once.

His clerk left the room.

"You keep Walter too closely to business, father!" observed the young officer.

"Not more than myself," was the reply.

"Surely, it cannot be necessary——"

"Of that I am the best judge!" interrupted the old gentleman sharply. "Be satisfied," he added, "to enjoy your own liberty, without troubling your head about us! I sent for you to talk over matters of importance. I said three in my note, and it is now half-past!"

The captain muttered something about regimental business.

"You need not trouble yourself for an excuse!" replied his father. "I know the exact value of one—I have fifty, at the very least, every day of my life. Frederick," he continued, "you are now six-and-twenty, an age at which most men think of settling in the world. You make little use of the opportunities my indulgence has afforded you!"

The joyous tone and cheerful smile of his son abandoned him in an instant, and a close observer might have detected something like confusion in his manner as he stammered in reply, that he was too much devoted to his profession to think of marrying yet—quite time enough at thirty—in fact, that he had no leisure to fall in love, but that, since his father wished it, he would think seriously of the matter.

The old gentleman heard him to an end with exemplary patience—one of the few virtues he possessed. There was the same cold, polite, half smile upon his lips with which he listened to the pleadings of a customer soliciting him to discount doubtful paper.

"I have considered all this, Frederick," he replied; "and have decided for you. I have reason to believe—nay, I am certain," continued the banker, "that Lady Sybella, the daughter of Lord Minton, whose estate joins the property I lately purchased in Berkshire, regards you with an eye of favor. His Lordship and I have talked over the affair; the match is a most eligible one—in fact, you have only to propose to be accepted."

"But I do not love Lady Sybella!" exclaimed the captain.

"You may, if you please," was the dry response.

"But she is so plain!"

"I did not marry for beauty," observed the old man; then seeing the flush which suddenly passed over the countenance of his son at this indelicate allusion to his mother, he added: "No, Sir—I married for more sterling qualities—and I think you will do me the justice to confess that I have done my duty as a husband?"

"Certainly."

"And as a father?"

"I, at least, should be ungrateful to deny it," replied Captain Graham.

As he said this, his thoughts involuntarily reverted to his brother Walter.

"Well, Sir, resumed his parent, "am I to be favored with your reply? None but a madman would hesitate—the alliance is unexceptionable. Lady Sybella is young, rich and noble—her father in great favor with the King, and what is better, with the ministry. His only son, Lord Allan, is a sickly youth. The reversion of the title is not improbable."

"I thought you despised titles?"

"Some titles," answered the banker.

"Father," said the young man, "you cannot expect—you will not exact this sacrifice—it is too terrible a price to pay for the years of extravagance and dissipation you have indulged me in. My heart revolts at it; it would cloud the rest of my existence—condemn me to misery and self-reproach! Let me appeal to your reason and affection! Give up this project, and in all else you shall find me obedient as becomes a son."

The features of the old man became rigid as if they were cast in iron.

"Have you concluded?" he demanded, at last; "if you have any reasons to urge against the match, I am willing to listen to them; but romantic, empty declamation is thrown away upon me! Do you think I am ignorant of your proceedings—your flirtation with the penniless daughter of a country curate, during your late visit to Paris. Any indiscretion in that quarter," he added, "I am willing to look over—nay, more—enable you to provide for the consequences; but a marriage with the girl would beggar you."

There was something sickening in the utter want of principle thus coldly enunciated by a parent to his son.

"Give me three months to consider!" exclaimed the Captain.

"No!"

"But one, then—and I pledge you my honor that the flirtation shall be carried on no further between me and the curate's daughter."

Richard Graham reflected for a few moments; then, opening a private memorandum book which was lying on the table before him, he began to write.

"Although I make it a principle not to depart from a resolution," he observed, "which I have once arrived at, I will for once break the rule. This is the fifteenth of November."

"It is, Sir."

"On the fifteenth of December I shall expect the honor of Captain Graham's reply—to hear definitely his choice between wealth or poverty—between the indulgence of a ridiculous caprice and the affection of a father. Good morning."

"At least let us part friends, Sir," said his son, at the same time extending his hand to him.

The banker declined it, coldly observing that it was unnecessary, till he knew whether they were to meet again as friends, or not.

With these words, which evinced his unalterable resolution, the stern old man resumed the occupation which the visit of Captain Graham had interrupted.

Frederick Graham passed through the banking house in a state of agitation more easy to imagine than describe.

Exactly at the same hour as it had done for the last five-and-twenty years, the well-appointed equipage of the wealthy banker drove up in front of the establishment, and before St. Paul's had done striking the gentleman quitted his private room. There were traces of unusual thought upon his brow, and the cashier and clerks, when they saw it, appeared intently busy.

As he passed through the offices, the eye of the old man rested for an instant on the pale features of his second son.

"Walter," he said, in a tone of unusual consideration, "you had better quit business for a few days!"

The young man stared with astonishment. It was the first time in his life his father had shown so much interest in his health.

"A trip to Brighton will be of service to you!" continued the speaker; "take a week. Banks can attend to the correspondence."

And, without waiting either for reply or thanks, the speaker entered his carriage, and drove off.

"I owe this to Fred!" thought his brother; "God bless him! His heart is in the right place—and yet I am weak enough sometimes to envy him!"

He did owe it to his brother—but not from the reasons he supposed.

When Captain Graham arrived at his apartments in Bond-street, he saw a brother officer—Lieutenant Orme—waiting for him.

"Fred," exclaimed the latter, "you look devilishly dull. Has the governor been reading you a lecture?"

"Worse!"

"Refused the supplies?"

"Worse, again!"

"That's impossible!" replied his friend, with a laugh; "seeing it is the last misfortune in the catalogue of human ills that flesh is heir to! I have seen the colonel, and obtained three days' leave of absence for both of us! What the deuce is the matter with you?"

"I am a ruined man!" replied the young Guardsman; "my father insists upon my marrying Lady Sybella!"

The countenance of Lieut. Orme changed from its mirth to a more serious expression.

"Threatens to disinherit me if I refuse! It is not the loss of wealth or the world's derision," he continued, "that I dread. Were I alone, I could face poverty! But when I reflect that Ellen must share it with me, the thought maddens and unmans me!"

"Do you think the governor suspects you are married?"

"Had he the slightest suspicion of such an event, he would have cursed me in the bitterness of his wrath—not have remonstrated with me! With the utmost difficulty, and by a promise in which I, like a coward, equivocated with truth, I obtained from him a respite of one month before I gave a final answer to his wishes!"

"And when it expires?"

His friend shrugged his shoulders.

Captain Graham rang the bell, and inquired of his valet, who answered it, if any letters had arrived. The man handed him one.

"I do not know the writing!" observed his master.

Scarcely had he perused the first three or four lines when he sank back on the sofa like one who had received a sudden blow either on the brain or in the heart. Fortunately the servant had left the room.

"Heavens, my dear fellow!" exclaimed his brother officer, "what has happened?"

A groan of suppressed agony, such as physical suffering could not have wrung from the lips of the strong man, was the only reply.

"Shall I ring for assistance?"

"Dying!" murmured Frederick; "dying!"

"Who is dying? No—not Ellen!"

At the name of the wife whom in a few hours more her husband had fondly anticipated he should clasp in his arms, the unhappy man burst into a flood of tears.

"My dear fellow——"

"Don't speak to me, Orme!" hoarsely articulated his friend; "I can't bear the sound of a human voice! I shall be a man again soon, or mad!" he added, twining his fingers in his hair and tearing; "or mad! Ellen—Ellen—this cruel, ill-advised concealment of our marriage has destroyed her! Had I been worthy of her, I should have braved the loss of fortune—the curse of twenty fathers! But now—too late—too late! Read—read!"

Lieutenant Orme took the letter from his hand, and read it to the end. Although a gay and exceedingly dissipated man, he had not naturally a bad heart. He had been the only witness of the secret marriage between his friend and the curate's penniless daughter, as the banker had contemptuously styled her.

"Fred," he said, "you are a father!"

Captain Graham started to his feet at the word. He felt that he had still something to live for.

"There is a chance," continued the speaker, "that by using expedition you may see Ellen again—receive her last embrace! Besides, whilst there is life, there is also hope! At any rate, this is the time for action—not grief!"

"You are right!" exclaimed his friend. "Oh, how weak and worthless I must appear to you for not having at once boldly avowed my marriage to my father! But I am rightly punished! Heaven saw I was unworthy of so much good, and will deprive me of her."

Accompanied by Lieutenant Orme, whose kindness of heart would not permit his friend to travel alone, they started at once, and took an express train for Canterbury.

We must now request our readers to accompany us once more to the Warden's Arms, to the chamber of the youthful mother and her new born child.

On an old-fashioned bed in a roomy, comfortable apartment, reclined the form of Ellen Graham. Although her features were fearfully pale and the hand of death was visible upon her cheek, her dark eyes retained their lustre. They were turned anxiously towards the door, and every time a step was heard upon the stairs, or the noise of a passing vehicle broke the stillness of the night, she would start and faintly ask if he were come.

At the side of the bed sat Dr. Chambers, who felt her pulse from time to time, or directed the nurse, who was half asleep by the fire, to prepare fresh cataplasms to the sufferer's feet.

Never in the course of his professional career had that kind-hearted man felt more deeply interested, or so bitterly regretted the inability of human skill to save; the utmost he could hope to do was to prolong the struggle between life and death by administering such powerful restoratives as art supplied.

"Will he not come?" murmured the sufferer; "will he not come?"

The doctor regarded his watch, and shook his head despondingly.

"I shall die without seeing him!" she continued; "without placing his boy in his arms—without receiving a last kiss and blessing!"

"He is certainly to be here by morning!" observed her medical attendant, soothingly.

"Keep me alive till then," replied the expecting wife, at the same time grasping the hand of the speaker and fixing her eyes upon him with an expression of mingled agony and supplication; "alive, though I live in torture! You will," she added, "I am sure you will—for you pity me. It is hard to die so young and so beloved!"

"All that my skill can do——"

"Yes, yes!" interrupted the patient, faintly; "I know that I must die—must quit my infant and its father; but not yet—not yet! I do not ask for life," she added, with a burst of grief, "only a few short hours, once more to see my husband!"

"Be calm," said the Doctor, kindly, for he saw that Mrs. Graham was exhausting herself by giving vent to her feelings.

"Calm!" said the dying woman, "and he far distant!"

"You must spare your remaining strength."

"I know that it is impious to repine. If I must not speak of him, I will pray for him—for him and for my child!"

For some time the bruised flower thus untimely crushed by the relentless hand of approaching death, remained with her eyes closed and her hands clasped in mental prayer; from time to time a single tear stole from beneath their quivering lids, and trickled down her cheeks, like drops of dew on the pale features of a marble statue.

The medical man felt deeply affected, and more than once was compelled to wipe away the moisture which obscured his own vision.

"She is sinking rapidly," he thought; "her last wish unfulfilled!"

Suddenly Mrs. Graham opened her eyes, and, half raising herself on the pillow, listened eagerly.

"No!" said the doctor, mournfully.

"'Tis he—it is my husband!" she exclaimed; "I hear a carriage!"

In a few moments the gentleman heard it too.

The next minute a hasty step was heard upon the stairs, and Captain Graham, pale and haggard with mental suffering, staggered rather than walked into the room.

His wife almost sprang from the bed as she threw herself upon his breast.

"Frederick!" she exclaimed, with renewed strength; "husband! Oh, I am happy now! Heaven has heard my prayer! Death has no terror in your arms! I see you once again—I feel your warm tears upon my cheek—hear you murmur the name of Ellen—Ellen, who so loves you!"

The above is all that will be published of this absorbing narrative in our columns. The continuation will be found in the New-York Ledger, of Sept. 29, which is now ready, and can be obtained at all the news depôts, or from any newspaper carrier. Remember to ask for the Ledger of Sept. 29, and in it you will get the continuation from where it leaves off here.

TRIESEMAR.—THE GREAT EUROPEAN DISCOVERY—Protected by Royal Letters Patent of England, and secured by the seals of the Ecole de Pharmacie de Paris, and the Imperial College of Medicine, Vienna.

TRIESEMAR No. 1. Is the remedy for general and local debility, loss of virile power, premature decay, and all the distressing consequences arising from early abuse, &c. Its effects are efficacious in youth, manhood and old age; the virile powers would not become impaired, even in the decline of life, if the Triesemar were universally adopted; all physical impediments vanish like magic before its influence, thus rendering its use invaluable to those entering the marriage state.

TRIESEMAR No. 2—Completely and entirely eradicates all traces of those disorders which copaiba and cubebs have so long been thought an antidote for, to the ruin of the health of a vast portion of the population.

TRIESEMAR No. 3—Is the great European remedy for that class of disorders which unfortunately the English Physician treats with mercury, to the inevitable destruction of the patient's constitution, and which all the Sarsaparilla in the world cannot remove.

TRIESEMAR No. 1, 2 and 3, are alike devoid of taste or smell and all nauseating qualities. They may lay on the toilet table without their use being detected.

Sold in tin cases at $3 each, divided into separate doses, as administered by Valpeau, Lallemand, Roux, &c.

DR. WARD'S UNFORTUNATE'S FRIEND—Cures private diseases when nothing else will. Cures, no matter how bad. Cures after all doctors have failed. Does all it professes to do—that is, cures private diseases quicker, safer, and more radically than any other doctor in the world. Cures the bad as well as the slight, while other remedies have no control. It is in vain to hope to be cured thoroughly, totally, radically, by any other remedy. Thousands have spent a little fortune without being cured, till they got Dr. Ward's remedy. If you are under any other doctor, and are not immediately cured or relieved by him, come to Dr. WARD, and he will cure you. I have made more cures than any other living physician. I inform the unfortunate too that not relying on one method, but acquainted with every improvement, I have great advantage over most who still treat on the old system, that requires many months, whereas I perform cures in as many days. There are thousands afflicted with these diseases. I would urge upon them the danger of delay. I cure slight cases in one day; the worst known in a week. No. 50 Canal st., one door east of No. 432 Broadway, is the place to get my extraordinary and rapid remedy, unrivalled in every respect. Price $1, with a private treatise. A cure guaranteed.

SPECIAL MEDICAL NOTICE.—No. 50 Houston-st., second door west of Broadway, New-York.—E. C. JOHNSON, Physician and Surgeon, would inform his old patrons and the public that he is reestablished at this office, where he will continue his new and successful mode of treating diseases of the most malignant character. Dr. J. deems it unnecessary to speak of his professional qualifications, being long known as a graduate of the Pennsylvania University, a member of the State Medical Society of Massachusetts, and at one time a lecturer upon various diseases of the Massachusetts Hospital, Boston; also, a practitioner of this City. Ladies can consult the Doctor confidentially or one of their own sex whose superior knowledge and experience stamps her first in the treatment of all diseases peculiar to females. Dr. JOHNSON has a safe, never failing, invaluable remedy for special irregularities, and other diseases to which females are so frequently liable from exposure and neglect. Patients of both sexes desiring medical or surgical aid can consult Dr. J. below, assured of the most strict confidence, either in person or by mail.

Office open all of the day and evening.

DR. MAGNIN'S LUCINA CORDIAL, OR ELIXIR OF LOVE.—The delightful and positive invigorant of the human system, is fast superseding all other remedies; in fact, when its virtues become fully known it will be the only remedy in use. Its action on the nervous system and reproductive organs is most extraordinary; diffusing all over excitement and infusing into the debilitated organization that degree of tension which is requisite to give the human system the enjoyment of its full powers, both mentally and physically. As an appetizer it is equally remarkable; assimilating with the gastric juices of the stomach, it assists them in more readily dissolving all nutritious substances, and converting them into pure and wholesome blood; thus the digestion is improved and the whole framework of man moves on in a more vigorous and harmonious manner thereby. Price $1 per bottle, or two bottles for $5. Principal office No. 3 Maiden-lane.

DR. MAGNIN.

MEDICAL ADVISER AND MARRIAGE GUIDE.—Eleventh edition, cloth, 346 pages, 25 colored engravings, representing all the diseases of the genital organs of the male and female, with the latest discoveries in reproduction. Both married and single should consult it. Sold at No. 322 Broadway, and mailed free for $1, by the author, M. LARMONT, Physician and Surgeon, No. 61 Reade-st., corner of Broadway, where he cures all these diseases, from 11 A. M. till 2 P. M., and 6 to 9 in the evening, Sundays excepted. We concur with the other papers in recommending Dr. LARMONT to the afflicted.—Courrier des Etats Unis, Staats Zeitung, Democrat, Day-Book, Courier, Dispatch and New-Brunswick Times.

PRIVATE CONSULTATIONS.—DR. WATSON confines his practice to one class of disease, in which he has treated more than twenty thousand cases, without one instance of failure. The remedies are mild, and do not keep the patient from business, or expose him to detection, while in most recent cases there is a cure in twenty-four hours. Dr. WATSON desires to state that, as many have been deceived by the promises of certain charlatans, and been injured by drugs, patients are respectfully invited to call, in the first place, as there is no charge for consultations.

Capture of a Burglar—His Serious Injury in His Attempts to Escape.

WILLIAM GOODMAN was found in the yard of house No. 167 West Thirty-third-street, with his leg badly broken, he having entered the house with false keys, where he had secured a quantity of jewelry valued at $200. The stolen articles were found on the premises, where he had thrown them. It appears that as he was obtaining the articles he was surprised, when he jumped from the third-story window to the ground, breaking his leg in such a manner that he was necessarily taken to the Hospital, where the limb was amputated. A commitment was made out by Justice PEARCEY.

Attempted Suicides.

Sunday evening a girl of loose habits, passing by the name of ANNA, residing in the house No. 75 Grand-street, attempted to commit suicide by drinking laudanum. She had of late led a disgracefully loose life, so much so that she became tired of her existence, and, as she herself says, "The perusal of the remarks of the press on the late suicide in Duane-street led to the determination on her part to be made a heroine." She purchased four ounces of the poison and drank it all, but shortly after regretting her rash act, she informed the servant of it, when medical aid was procured and the contents of her stomach discharged by the free use of lamp-oil and tartar emetic. She is now in a fair way for recovery, and heartily sorry for her foolishness.

ELLEN MCCARTY jumped overboard at the foot of Jackson-street, and would have been drowned but for the timely assistance of a Mr. Robert Walker, who, jumping in after, saved her.

Rearrest of Escaped Convicts.

JOHN DOLAN, WILLIAM COURTNEY and DANIEL MATTHEWS, three men under sentence at the Penitentiary at Blackwell's Island, were yesterday arrested by Officers GROSE and BREWER, of the Nineteenth District, they having made their escape from their place of confinement. They were sent back by order of Justice BOGART.

Outrage.

DAVID MURPHY, a marine, on board the U. S. receiving ship North Carolina, was arrested charged with a felonious assault and battery on the person of HENRY TAYLOR. It is alleged by complainant, that as he and a friend, HENRY VALENTINE, were returning from a fishing excursion, and while passing the ship, defendant taking deliberate aim, fired at them, the ball hitting the boat just by where Mr. TAYLOR sat. Accused was held for examination by Justice BRENNAN.

Assault by Women.

THOMAS CARBEY, of No. 122 Greenwich st., was found lying on the sidewalk in Park-place by policeman ROCHE of the 1st district, his hip-joint being dislocated. He states that as he was passing down the place he was met by several loose women, who attacked him, knocking him down, and inflicting the injury which he had sustained. The bone was set at the Hospital.

COMMON PLEAS—Appeals from inferior Courts.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT—Sept. 24.

Before Judges Nelson and Betts.

The Court was occupied this morning with the case of Abijah Brown vs. Henry E. Schoonmaker. The suit was brought to a hearing some months since, and the facts were agreed upon at that time, and a case was made, which now comes up before the Court for argument.

This suit is one of several suits brought to test the title of a large tract of land near Fifth-avenue and Twelfth-street, which was formerly a farm owned by Jacob Arden, a butcher. The facts upon which the suit is brought were published at the time when they were agreed upon.

The amount of property involved is very great, and the decision will affect a great number of parties.

Mr. W. C. NOYES opened the argument for the plaintiff. He is supported by Mr. CHATFIELD and Judge BRONSON—Mr. O'CONNOR and Mr. BIDWELL are counsel for defendants. The argument is likely to be one such as is rarely heard in our courts.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM—SEPT. 24.

Before Hon. Justice Clerke.

DECISIONS.

Lane vs. Loose et al.—Motion denied without costs. See opinion, with Richard E. Beniah, Clerk at Chambers.

Before Hon. Justice Cowles.

CONSTRUCTION OF WILLS—STATUTE OF TRUSTS.

Dougherty et al vs. Dougherty et al.—The plaintiffs are the children and only heirs-at-law of Dudley Dougherty, deceased, and the action is brought against his widow, executors, the husbands of the married plaintiffs and the grandchildren of the decedent, for the purpose of setting aside his will as contrary to the statute of trusts.

The instrument is inartificially drawn, the scrivener being a retired cartman, and is claimed to be void. By the third clause the decedent directed that his house and lot, corner of Macdougal and Amity streets, should not be sold until after the decease of his three children, which limitation the plaintiffs contend is void, because the power of alienation is suspended for a longer period than during the continuation of two lives.

By the sixth clause, the decedent also directed that the rents and profits of his estate should accumulate until they amounted to the sum of $30,000, when the interest of that sum should be equally divided among his children, which was opposed on the ground that such accumulation, not being for the benefit of minor children, was void by the statute.

COWLES, J.—The third clause of the bill is utterly void by reason of its suspending the alienation of the real estate for a period of time longer than allowed by the Revised Statutes, and this clause of the will is to be decreed absolutely void and of no effect. (1 R. S., 723, sec. 15.)

The sixth clause of the will is also void, and must be so decreed to be. (1 R. S., 723, sec. 15, and 774, sec. 3 and 4; Harris vs. Clark, 3 Selden, 242.)

These clauses being declared void, the remainder of the will will stand and be carried into execution according to the terms, as far as it provides for the disposition of the testator's property. The disposition of what will remain unprovided for by the terms of the will after the cancelling of these two clauses, will pass and descend in the same manner as if no will had been made.

Before Hon. Justice Morris.

Lewis vs. Auer et al.—No costs of motion to either party.

Schenck vs. Mudge et al.—Motion granted, without costs to either party. Make order and submit it to me.

Before Hon. Justice Roosevelt.

Crosby vs. Amoum.—Settled.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS—GENERAL TERM.

Before Judges Ingraham and Woodruff.

The Court sat yesterday to receive arguments on paper in relation to appeals from the inferior Courts. No decisions were rendered.

MARINE COURT.

Before Hon. Justice Birdsall.

THE POLICE AND THE PRIMARY ELECTIONS.

William Roach vs. Twomey, Captain of the Nineteenth Ward Police, and four others.—This was an action for trespass in illegally and forcibly entering the premises of the plaintiff, situate in Forty-second-street, on the evening of the 16th of August last. The nominal parties were the keeper of the house where the primary election for Delegates to the Syracuse Convention was held, and the Police of the Ward, but the actual parties were His Honor, Fernando the First, and Anson Herrick, Esq., Alderman, and the affair was a sort of coup d'état, in which the Mayor and the Police defeated the Alderman. It appeared that proceedings for the election of Delegates opened at the house of Roach about 6 P. M., under the superintendence of three inspectors, selected from the Ward. They held the election in a room, behind a barricade, holding the ballot box up so that the voters could put in their ballots. During the early part of the balloting, Captain Twomey asked to come in to prevent any disturbance; Roach and one of the Inspectors positively refused, but the other said they had better come in if there was to be a row. To this the first Inspector replied that there would be no fighting among them there and that the police must keep out. The latter would not however, heed this warning and came in through the window having first torn down the barricade. They then stood by the ballot box until they said the time was up—and then the election closed. They said they came to see fair play and took the ballot box over to another where the ballots were counted. The Inspectors accompanied the police and they had a little brandy all round and left for home about 11 o'clock. On cross examination of the witness, he stated that he saw no row or breach of the peace before the police put themselves through the window into Roach's house. There was a kind of a muss at one time but that was at the latter end, but no improper language was used or disturbance within the house before the police interfered. There were two tickets run—the Herrick ticket and the Wood ticket; cannot say how many votes were polled, but there were more than 500 and perhaps 1,000. On the part of the defence it was set up that they were justified in the course they pursued by the symptoms of disturbance which pervaded the assemblage collected outside of the premises of the plaintiff, and they took the necessary precautions to preserve the peace of the Ward. The case had not concluded up to hour of adjournment.

PUTTING A FAST HORSE, BUT A KICKER AND A ROARER.

Before Judge Thompson.

Sinclair vs. Langley.—This was an action to recover $340, being the difference paid to the defendant on the purchase of a horse and the actual value of the animal. It appeared that in July last the plaintiff owned a very fast horse, which could trot a mile in 2:30, but as the animal had unfortunately adopted the habit of side kicking, the owner was willing to sell for $400. The plaintiff knowing that such "a fast crab" would be worth at least $1,200, bought the horse without a trial, and the next day made the awkward discovery that he had been bitten severely, for his fast one was not only a kicker but a "roarer," and this latter quality reduced its value to a mere nominal $60. It appeared in evidence that the vendor of the horse was not aware of its roaring qualifications, not having driven the animal for some time, and that if the purchaser had given the horse a trial on the road the defect could have been ascertained before the bargain was concluded. The Judge held that the defendant had not practiced any deception in the sale of the horse, that there was no fraud in the transaction, no warrantee having been given, although the horse was represented as perfectly sound with the exception of a habit of kicking; and yet there could be no doubt the respiratory organs of the animal were defective, so as to render him utterly valueless. The expression "perfectly sound" was a mere expression of opinion, and not binding as a legal warrantee. Under these circumstances, the maxim caveat emptor applies, and judgment must be given for the defendant.

On Sunday afternoon, two men in a small boat, approached the receiving-ship North Carolina, lying at the Brooklyn Navy-Yard, with the evident intention of either furnishing some of the sailors with liquor or of aiding them in deserting. Finally, the sentinel fired at them—the ball from his musket just grazed the bow oarsman, and passed through the boat. The boatmen concluded that it was about time to leave, and acted accordingly.

MONDAY, Sept. 24—P. M.

The Official City Bank Averages for the week ending Saturday last, Sept. 22, which are advertised on another page of this paper, present the following changes from the previous statement of Sept. 15, being a decreased movement in every department:

Decrease in Loans	$815,285
Loss of Specie	557,849
Decrease of Circulation	5,390
Decrease of Deposits	405,159

The loss of Specie extended to a majority of the Banks. The principal decrease in Loans and Deposits was with the Metropolitan Bank, which does the business of most of the New-York Country Banks. Their late heavy City balances are now being used in their local business. The City Banks probably commence the new week with less Specie than the average here shown, owing to the heavy French shipments of Gold on Saturday. Including the Sub-Treasury statement, the following is the general comparison with the preceding statement of Sept. 15, and that of the corresponding week last year:

COMPARATIVE RECAPITULATION.

	Sept. 23, '54.	Sept. 22, '55.	Sept. 15, '55.
Loans	$92,905,911	$96,361,734	[illegible]
Specie	12,932,366	11,655,391	12,213,240
Circulation	6,802,623	7,716,492	7,721,925
Deposits	72,938,453	80,105,147	80,510,306
In Sub-Treasury	7,094,185	6,576,148	6,313,364

The actual circulation of the City Banks is nearly half a million more than is now returned in the official averages. The Butchers' and Drovers' Bank has persisted in refusing to recognize its old Safety Fund Circulation, ever since the Weekly Statement Law went into operation, and the Greenwich Bank, whose old charter has expired, is, of late, imitating the bad example. It is only such sharp bank men as Presidents AKES and WHEELRIGHT who can afford to do this. The Bank of New-York, Bank of America, Merchants' Exchange and others report their old circulation every week, with the new, and thereby acknowledge their obligation to the public to take it up when presented.

The Street demand for money was active to-day, and pretty general among the Stock Brokers. The rate on demand is full 7 ₩ cent. The negotiation of business paper, outside of Bank, was again moderate. The terms are 1@2 ₩ cent. dearer than regular discounts at Bank. Speculation on the Stock Exchange is somewhat dampened, and there were heavy cash sales of Erie this afternoon at a decline of 1 ₩ cent. as compared with Saturday afternoon. The market took the stock, however, with freedom, and its friends say the movement for the rise is not yet over. The rest of the list sympathized to some extent. Reading sold down to 94¼ cash. The sales of Illinois Centrals reached $50,000 at 85¼ cash, 86@86½ on time. The business to-day in foreign bills indicated a light mail for the Boston steamer, though the buying may be much larger to-morrow. The regular Bankers are drawing at 109¼, and transient Bank bills from the South were done at 109¼. There is also a fair offering of commercial names at 109¼@⅜. Francs and North of Europe Exchange are steady; a good request for the former, which will induce a specie shipment of $400,000 or $500,000. The last California mail packet was to leave San Francisco on the 5th September, and will be due on Thursday or Friday. We hear that the Nicaragua steamer probably left on the same day, though the calculation has been that she left on Saturday, the 1st, or Monday, 3d September. The regular sub-Treasury balance was increased to-day $96,500, and now stands $6,674,288.

Money Circular for Europe.

TRANSLATION.

The week offers no point of very marked interest to notice. The arrival of the Liverpool steamer to the 8th September, with the advice that the Bank of England had raised its rate of discount, has checked the upward movement of speculative Stocks, and they have since then experienced various oscillations. Orders to buy American Stocks for European account continue extremely limited, leaving our market for investment Stocks perfectly calm. With the exception of some sales of minor importance of Virginia 6s, without fluctuation, and of Missouri 6s at a decline of ½ ₩ cent., the transactions in State Stocks have been almost null. City and County Bonds continue neglected. The same remark applies to Railroad Bonds generally. The only ones which have given rise to transactions worthy of mention are the Illinois Constructive, which, after having reached 87½, fell to 85¼. Panamas have declined 1 ₩ cent. For other descriptions our to-day quotations vary but little from last week. The demand for exchanges has not been large, and the rates close weak. Principal sales on London 109¼@109½, on Paris 5.13¾@5.12½.

Money Circular for the Steamer.

[Africa via Boston.]

NEW-YORK, Monday, Sept. 24, 1855.

TRANSLATED EXTRACT.

The firmness noticed at the Stock Exchange at the close of our last advices, was renewed the following day, but it did not last long. This interruption was caused by the news brought ₩ Liverpool steamer of 8th inst., that the Bank of England had raised its rate of discount ½ ₩ cent., and also by a more marked demand for money in our own market. Transactions in all classes of securities have been very limited—the shares of the Erie Railroad alone excepted. State Stocks very inactive, excepting Virginia, which have been sold at ½ ₩ cent. decline. Missouri's have declined 1½, Indiana and California ½. We note some trifling sales of Cleveland, Detroit and Milwaukee City Bonds. In County Bonds we have not heard of any sales. Chicago and Rock Island Bonds have declined 1 ₩ cent. These Bonds are only convertible on the 10th January of each year up to 1860. Erie 1862 Bonds have fallen ½ ₩ cent., the 1875 Bonds ½, the 1871 and 1883 Bonds 1 ₩ cent.—all with very trifling transactions. Illinois Central Construction Bonds have fallen ½. In Freeland Bonds there have been but two or three small sales at 84, and at 83½ ex privilege. For two days past these Bonds have been heavy at ½ ₩ cent. below these quotations. Some few sales have been effected in Michigan Central Bonds and Galena and Chicago 1st and 2d Mortgages, without change of price.

MARIE & KANZ.

Chicago and Fond du Lac Railroad.

From the Chicago Press.

Our readers should remember that this road was formerly called the Illinois and Wisconsin Railroad. It is completed, and in operation to Woodstock, McHenry County, fifty miles from Chicago, and is doing a fine business. During the embarrassments of last year, it suffered severely in common with other roads; but it is now progressing with energy, and it is expected that it will be finished to Janesville, 38 miles from Woodstock, by the 1st of January next. Five thousand tons of iron have recently been purchased, and several cargoes of it are on the way. This amount of iron, it is thought, is sufficient to lay the track to Janesville and also extend the northern division of the road from Waupun to the Junction of the Milwaukee and La Crosse Railroad. This latter road will probably be completed from Milwaukee to the Junction by the 1st of January, giving us by the Lake Shore road a direct communication with Fond du Lac on the 1st of January. It is thought that the road between Janesville and the Junction of the La Crosse can be completed early in the Spring.

The negotiations for iron and the progressive basis on which it has been put have been effected principally by the persevering efforts of Hon. WM. B. OGDEN, President of the road, within the last few months. Any one who will examine its location on the map, and inform himself as to the character of the country through which the road passes, will be satisfied that it will be one of the best roads entering the city. Its early completion is therefore a matter of much public interest.
